writing to you via email. Thought you might like to hear a perspective from rural Northern California.

My wife and I live in the Sierra Nevada foothills in Placer County. The County includes the densely populated area in the Sacramento Valley, as well as the popular Lake Tahoe area to the northeast. We live in the sparsely-populated mid-section (about 20 people per square mile); truly both fly-over and drive-by country. I am an attorney in solo practice and my wife is a social worker.

don't get my information from any of the cable channels. I get it from trusted Twitter accounts. But on occasion, when I see a mainstream headline, or video clip, I can understand how people can become frightened. If all of one's information was sourced from the mainstream media (though we're starting to see a few like Brit Hume wake up), fear and panic are a perfectly logical and natural response. Garbage in, garbage out.

For those who prefer independent thinking and doing their own research, good luck. YouTube has censored a discussion of the situation by two practicing physicians in Kern County. For the sin of being a sober, rational analysis by two professionals,

You will not be surprised, at this point, to hear me say that I am not afraid of the damn virus. (What, were we all immortal before it came along?) Here's what I am afraid of: how we are reacting. Of how people so easily and willingly gave up their rights, rights that were not granted to them by government, but by their Creator. Of how petty tyrants at all levels so quickly abused their power. Of how medical professionals somehow dictate economic and cultural policies. Of the obvious selective enforcement of lockdown orders. Of how a diocese cancelled Mass for a month. And of the new narrative that we'll never fully return to normal.

No news to you, but there have been, and continue

The company anticipates reduced demand for its physician-administered products while pandemic-related access measures remain in place. In addition, declines in medical visits and elective surgeries also will have a negative impact on the demand for certain products, including BRIDION (sugammadex).

In our Animal Health business, revenue was positively impacted by approximately $60 million in the first quarter as customers made advance purchases to secure supply for livestock products and BRAVECTO (fluralaner), given the uncertainty related to expanding social distancing measures. The company expects that reduced veterinary visits and decreased protein and milk consumption due to restaurant and school closures will negatively impact the business going forward. Merck also expects that the negative impacts on the economy will have an additional unfavorable effect on its Animal Health business.

My family moved to the United States from Poland when I was 4. My parents lived under the boot of communism for decades. Though my mom won't speak much about it my dad would speak to me at length about how lucky we we're to be in the last place on Earth that actually valued freedom. I lost my dad to multiple myeloma in 2018 but the wisdom he shared with me is still fresh in mind. Be thankful for my freedom, but never assume it's free or safe. Never let go of it. It finally seems like others in Illinois are taking heed and not staying still. I know of protests that are coming up soon, and area stores. A few people have gotten sick, gotten better, and returned to work. This is anecdotal of course and limited to my experience among 19 stores but one would think that it is at least an interesting sample to consider. A large group of people constantly exposed to the public at a much higher volume than normal for an extended period and no doomsday scenario where we are all dropping like flies or being carted off to the ER like an assembly line. Both of the people who I personally know who had tested positive were mild cases and have returned to work and are no worse for wear. Though I accept the virus is a real thing

When we purchased the building and renovated it...I can only say that these were the most stressful times of my life. We didn't have the money and instead had to borrow against almost two years of revenue...plus financing $200K on 0% credit cards. We put everything we had into creating a home for our family and a business that would free up time to raise our two kids.

We welcomed our first child the week we moved in and welcomed another daughter in November of 2019. It brings us immense pride to be able to have our daughters see us work for ourselves first hand.

You make ridiculous statements without properly thinking about all the variables. You have zero insight into the capacity of healthcare systems, the complexities of standard operating protocols hospitals are going through right now, and sufficient PPE for no cross-contamination.

Thousands of surgeries cancelled despite empty Ontario hospital beds: FAO

BY ANTONELLA ARTUSO
ORIGINAL | LAST PUBLISHED: APR 28, 2020

An estimated 35 people in Ontario have died due to delayed cardiac surgeries during the pandemic, Health Minister Christine Elliott says.

A study by researches associated with the United Health Network in Toronto used historical data to estimate the impact of COVID-19 planning measures on cardiac procedures.

"Any death that happened because of COVID-19 — whether directly or indirectly — is a tragedy," Elliott said Tuesday. "We feel for those families who've lost family members — whether it has been from cancer death, cardiac death or a COVID-19 death. But these were decisions that we had to make. The decisions were made by medical personnel."

Her boss contacted her shortly after she posted it and told her to delete it because of the "tone of the question." Apparently, questioning political leaders isn't okay any more. For what it's worth, the "tone" was innocuous. She just posed a question. But, you can't question the narrative.

The most disturbing emails I have received so far about panic involve parents who have locked children inside for weeks or in some cases since March. Given what we now know about the minimal risks to kids, refusing to let them outside is abusive. I don't know another word for it.

1/ Okay, I have DELETED the three previous tweets (which I have screenshotted and will post at the end of this) because a reader correctly pointed out that although the language at the top of the report does not match the FB post (which explicitly compares CV to flu)...

Hello Mr. Berenson,

I do not have a Twitter account and consequently am writing to you via email. Thought you might like to hear a perspective from rural Northern California.

My wife and I live in the Sierra Nevada foothills in Placer County. The County includes the densely populated area in the Sacramento Valley, as well as the popular Lake Tahoe area to the northeast. We live in the sparsely-populated mid-section (about 20 people per square mile); truly both fly-over and drive-by country. I am an attorney in solo practice and my wife is a social worker

For whatever reason, many young adults don't do those things as much as earlier generations. Risky activity has clearly fallen in people under 30 (cannabis use is a notable exception). These behavior changes are usually viewed positively - the last six weeks suggest a downside.

The Washington Post
Democracy Dies in Darkness

In pandemic's early days, U.S. saw an estimated 37,100 more deaths than would normally be expected

The review shows 13,500 more deaths than are now attributed to covid-19 for a six-week period in March and April, as updated federal data suggests real-time covid-19 death counts do not convey the extent of the toll.

I used to think there was evidence of both undercounting and overcounting, but given the highly aggressive way in which we are coding deaths, I no longer do. This It is possible the all-cause minus reported #Covid rise may UNDERSTATE the true increase in lockdown-related deaths.

sporting goods, toy stores and florists, given they follow additional safety protocols that will be released Thursday, Newsom said.

The state is also working to create guidelines that will allow restaurants and other hospitality businesses to open their doors again.

However, Newsom said the next phase does not currently include the reopening of offices, seated dining in restaurants or shopping at malls.

The governor said a key consideration for entering phase two is the ability for health authorities to test and conduct contact tracing of infections.

"This is a very positive sign and it has happened for only one reason: the data says it can happen," Newsom said. "But we recognize as we begin to modify ... possible community spread will occur. If sporting goods, toy stores and florists, given they follow additional safety protocols that will be released Thursday, Newsom said.

The state is also working to create guidelines that will allow restaurants and other hospitality businesses to open their doors again.

However, Newsom said the next phase does not currently include the reopening of offices, seated dining in restaurants or shopping at malls.

The governor said a key consideration for entering phase two is the ability for health authorities to test and conduct contact tracing of infections.

"This is a very positive sign and it has happened for only one reason: the data says it can happen," Newsom said. "But we recognize as we begin to modify ... possible community spread will occur. If

So panic porn purveyors like @washingtonpost are now focused on all-cause mortality to make #COVID death counts seem as high as possible. The problem, of course, is doing so ignores the increasing evidence that the LOCKDOWNS themselves are also driving deaths (more on this soon).

In pandemic's early days, U.S. saw an estimated 37,100 more deaths than would normally be expected

The review shows 13,500 more deaths than are now attributed to covid-19 for a six-week period in March and April, as updated federal data suggests real-time covid-19 death counts do not convey the extent of the toll.

Correction: 88% of patients have survived; the discharge rate is likely slightly lower as that figure includes the ~150 still in the hospital as well as the ~650 discharged. (About 55 are in the ICU, down from 80 a few weeks ago.)

Same. In a country where 'lockdowns' exist but are near impossible to follow(population density, poverty) a young population, strong sun and the low lethality of this virus make it a non-event. Of course the world theater is on there as well.

In South Africa for example, life expectancy is 64 with less than 5% of the population over 65. "the prime target of this virus"
As for those infected with HIV, there's no data yet on how the virus might impact those communities. So far, so good.

This doesn't really say. Also median or mean big difference. Median for NYC will likely be around 72 is my guess (certainly between 74 and 70) based on these NYC stats. Mean is somewhat harder to estimate. Probably a bit less than that. Unlikely to be 80 or 82.

I don't debate your point but Canada has private homes too, and many are as bad or worse.

In any event it's government that must always be held accountable for such failures.

Sorry wasn't clearer. I meant how accurate do you think the stats are? I recall ~30 days ago people suspected a high % of total deaths were concentrated in nursing homes, but data was scant (not tracked or not published). Has data improved? We can't change what we can't measure.

The #ReopenNC protest that occurred in Downtown Raleigh today has been cleared. We explained to the protestors that at this time, they are not allowed to protest. It is a non-essential activity and violates the Governor's Executive Order.

There was one arrest made by the State Capitol Police.

Mysterious Coronavirus Illness Claims 3 Children in New York

A baffling ailment linked to Covid-19 has killed three young children and sickened 73 others across the state.

A mysterious syndrome has killed three young children in New York and sickened 73 others, Gov. Andrew M. Cuomo said on Saturday, an alarming rise in a phenomenon that was first publicly identified earlier this week.

The syndrome, a toxic-shock inflammation that affects the skin, the eyes, blood vessels and the heart, can leave children seriously ill, with some patients requiring mechanical ventilation. Many of the symptoms bear some resemblance to a rare childhood illness called Kawasaki disease, which can lead to

Yeah this is on the thread. Telemedicine is seeing patients and running their course of treatment. He sees 40 a day, from 4AM to noon, from rural Louisiana to southern Jersey, where there is a shortage of critical care staff. You need COVID-19 to be a lie. I wish you were right.

May 4, 2020: COVID-19 Daily Update

This message is sent on behalf of the EHC executive team.

The purpose of this communication is to provide COVID-19 system updates specifically related to operations and staffing. You can find additional information on the COVID-19 intranet site.

Daily Situational Awareness
As a part of our Daily Update reporting, we are sharing daily and cumulative graphs showing the number of inpatient discharges to home. In addition, on a weekly basis we will also begin sharing admissions, discharges and deaths in an attempt to increase the information flow to our teams – and in response to requests from our teams for more big picture data.

Our 88% survival rate is something about which to be very proud. These top tier results are due the incredible work of our care teams – made up of all the clinicians and non-clinicians that care for our patients in the Ambulatory, Emergency, Acute and Critical Care settings as well as all of the support team members who make sure the care teams have what they need.

Daily Updates

- PUIs (persons under investigation): 97
- COVID-19 positive current in-house admissions: 148

Cumulative Updates

- COVID-19 positive discharges to home (to date): 645
- COVID-19 symptoms: Fever >100°F, chills, cough, shortness of breath or difficulty

Alex Berenson
@AlexBerenson

Correction: 88% of patients have survived; the discharge rate is likely slightly lower as that figure includes the ~150 still in the hospital as well as the ~650 discharged. (About 55 are in the ICU, down from 80 a few weeks ago.)

1/ People have asked about the new @ihme_uw figures showing 135,000 deaths. Look - in a way we should be pleased they are updating the model to (reported) reality. So what's really happening? Why so many deaths if the IFR really keeps declining and hospitalizations are so low?

2/ A couple of dynamics are clearly at play. First, we are coding aggressively (this is not a secret); and the all-cause mortality overhang is confusing because we are now seeing a spike in non-COVID lockdown deaths (how large we don't know, but this is real)...

Alex Berenson @AlexBerenson · May 4

3/ I'll have more on this soon; there are interesting state mortality data that need to mature a bit. So some of the increase probably comes from the way we're counting. But at the same time we know that [redacted] cuts a swath when it hits nursing homes...

2 72 369

Alex Berenson @AlexBerenson · May 4

4/ In almost every state, between 50% and 80% of all deaths are of people in long-term care facilities. That fact affects hospitalizations because many of those people die so quickly they aren't being hospitalized...

Hi Alex,

I saw your tweet regarding the 39 year old woman who died from a blood clot in her lung and who tested negative for COVID 19. I am concerned because my 28 year old daughter was in the ER this past week with a blood clot in her lung. She also tested negative for COVID 19 and has been inactive due to working from home in Indiana. She had no history of blood clots and was active (running) prior to the stay at home orders.
I wouldn't be surprised to hear of this occurring with others as well. I wonder if doctors are even aware of these occurrences.

Thanks for all you are doing!

About Kawasaki Disease

Kawasaki disease (KD), also known as Kawasaki syndrome, is an acute febrile illness of unknown etiology that primarily affects children younger than 5 years of age. The disease was first described in Japan by Tomisaku Kawasaki in 1967, and the first cases outside of Japan were reported in Hawaii in 1976.

Clinical signs include fever, rash, swelling of the hands and feet, irritation and redness of the whites of the eyes, swollen lymph glands in the neck, and irritation and inflammation of the

It's a bit elite to think that only "elite media" coverage of COVID tells you everything you need to know about the media's priority. The nursing home story has absolutely been front and center at the Houston Chronicle and many other metro newspapers in this country.

> Alex Berenson @AlexBerenson
> Let's be clear: the fact the nursing home deaths are not front and center every day in elite media coverage of #COVID tells you everything you need to know about the media's priority - which is instilling panic (and punishing @realDonaldTrump), not driving good health policy.

Some US states with high comorbidities and obesity (and very aggressive coding) may have median death rates in the 79s, but the overall data could not be clearer. Appreciate the chance to explain, though.

More age data: Age median and range (all cases, non-hospitalized, hospitalized and deaths)

All cases	46	<1 month - 109 years
Non-hospitalized cases	46	<1 month - 109 years

Add a little COVID-19 to the mix and you have a perfect formula for an increased risk for venous thromboembolism.

Low-dose heparin anticoagulation (or equivalent alternative) prophylaxis is routinely administered (standard of care) to elderly patients admitted to hospitals for myriad medical issues to prevent DVT. When the government issued lockdown orders, they should have warned the vulnerable populations of this increased risk.

Alex Berenson ✓
@AlexBerenson

A gentle correction here from the pulmonologist - pulmonary emboli will be common from inactivity (and is very commonly seen in #COVID patients) - stroke will be a secondary complication.

> Actually, the autopsy study was associating COVID with pulmonary embolism, most likely related to an increased incidence of deep vein thrombosis in the study population.
> The relationship to strokes probably due to COVID producing a generalized hypercoaguable state. Complex issue, but in order for a DVT clot to produce a stroke, the clot would have to move across an intracardiac defect, bypassing the pulmonary circulation and travel thru the arterial system to the brain. It can happen, but an uncommon mechanism for stroke.

More lockdown madness: a pulmonologist points out one reason #COVID may be associated with stroke is that keeping people inside and thus off their feet is a known clotting risk - especially in the elderly.

schools can then continue as normal, as neither the number of people nor the distance rules will apply to children of kindergarten and primary school age. This also applies to the leisure activities of children of kindergarten and primary school age, e.g. sports, youth and leisure activities and music education.

Students in upper secondary schools and universities may resume attending class in their school buildings, but there are limits to the number of people; no more than 50 individuals may be in the same area in those schools, and caution must be taken to maintain the 2-metre distance between individuals.

A smart piece from - the Federal Reserve has saved the banks and stock and credit markets (and the billionaire and highly leveraged private equity firms and hedge funds, which should have been left to collapse) - even as the real economy circles the drain.

Another piece of the dynamic is that super-wealthy Wall Street donors tend to focus on the federal government but the real problem here is at the state level.

From [illegible] – a union that represents grocery workers nationally and is unlikely to understate [illegible] deaths: 1.3 million members working mostly in public-facing jobs; 72 reported deaths. Fatality rate 0.0055% over a two-month period...

Tough to compare this figure with the background death rate for these workers without having specific demographic information (and knowing more about what's being coded) - but it hardly suggests retail is a high-risk vector for #SARS-COV-2.

A must-read. We can't hang our hopes on a vaccine in the next 18 mo (or even the next 36). We need to be talking about other interim solutions (test/trace/isolate, therapies, long-term adaptation of social norms, etc.) as indefinite, not merely stopgap.

What @natesilver538 isn't saying: The US has 7,000-10,000 deaths a day, every day); if lockdown states go back months and look for deaths potentially attributable to #COVID WITHOUT requiring even a positive test, they can make the numbers look pretty much as large as they like.

> Nate Silver @NateSilver538
> Meanwhile, the deaths number partly reflects NY reporting about ~700 nursing home deaths that it hadn't confirmed originally, but which may not have occurred all that recently. There may be more of this in the future in NY and other states.

The most important thing to glean from it, in my mind, is that people distrust the media so profoundly that they'll accept conspiracy theories over mainstream news.

That's how utterly news agencies have failed them.

Part of the reason for the level of distrust? The moral narcissism of the media narrative-pushers. This isn't about "science," it's that they "know best" and shame anyone who raises questions, objects, etc. I analyzed how dangerous that power is, here:

Another piece of the dynamic is that super-wealthy Wall Street donors tend to focus on the federal government but the real problem here is at the state level.

Mysterious Coronavirus Illness Claims 3 Children in New York

A baffling ailment linked to Covid-19 has killed three young children and sickened 73 others across the state.

May 9, 2020 Updated 8:29 p.m. ET

A mysterious syndrome has killed three young children in New York and sickened 73 others, Gov. Andrew M. Cuomo said on Saturday, an alarming rise in a phenomenon that was first publicly identified earlier this week.

The syndrome, a toxic-shock inflammation that affects the skin, the eyes, blood vessels and the heart, can leave children seriously ill, with some patients requiring mechanical ventilation. Many of the symptoms bear some resemblance to a rare childhood illness called Kawasaki disease, which can lead to measures in reducing influenza transmission. Although these measures have mechanistic support based on our knowledge of how influenza is transmitted from person to person, randomized trials of hand hygiene and face masks have not demonstrated protection against laboratory-confirmed influenza, with 1 exception (18). We identified only 2 RCTs on environmental cleaning and no RCTs on cough etiquette.

Hand hygiene is a widely used intervention and has been shown to effectively reduce the transmission of gastrointestinal infections and respiratory infections (26). However, in our systematic review, updating the findings of Wong et al. (8), we did not find evidence of a persons in the general community to reduce their susceptibility (Figure 2). However, as with hand hygiene, face masks might be able to reduce the transmission of other infections and therefore have value in an influenza pandemic when healthcare resources are stretched.

It is essential to note that the mechanisms of person-to-person transmission in the community have not been fully delineated. Controversy remains over the role of transmission through fine-particle aerosols (1, 2). Transmission by indirect contact requires transfer of viable virus from respiratory mucosa onto hands and other surfaces, survival on those surfaces, and successful inoculation into the respiratory mucosa of another person. I want to highlight this incoherent rant last night from @EWErickson - a well-known anti-Trump "conservative," bc it points to the hurdles the anti-lockdown movement faces. For about 10 tweets, he calls protestors "whiners" - as if they are mainly worried about reopening bars...

Michigan Data

This information is updated daily at 3 p.m., with COVID-19 results included as of 10 a.m.

Note on deaths (05/07/20): Regular reviews of death certificate data maintained in Vital Records reporting systems are conducted by MDHHS staff three times per week. As a part of this process, records that identify COVID-19 infection as a contributing factor to death are compared against all laboratory confirmed cases of COVID-19 in the Michigan Disease Surveillance System (MDSS). If a death certificate is matched to a confirmed COVID-19 case and that record in the MDSS does not indicate the individual died, the MDSS record is updated to indicate the death and the appropriate local health department is notified. These matched deaths are then included with mortality information posted to the schools can then continue as normal, as neither the number of people nor the distance rules will apply to children of kindergarten and primary school age. This also applies to the leisure activities of children of kindergarten and primary school age, e.g. sports, youth and leisure activities and music education.

Students in upper secondary schools and universities may resume attending class in their school buildings, but there are limits to the number of people; no more than 50 individuals may be in the same area in those schools, and caution must be taken to maintain the 2-metre distance between individuals.

BTW - can you tell me where that chart came from?

I ask bc it doesn't foot. Meaning: the number of total "probable" deaths is reported as 5,313 - but when they are broken down by age the total is 4,248. (There's a similar gap for total deaths, which are either 18,635 or 19,702.)

7/ I tell myself this disruption has to end. Yet it goes on and on. So I stumble along as I wait for the reality of what has and has NOT happened in Japan and Sweden and now Georgia to sink in. It will. I promise. One day, one way or another, we'll take our lives back.

One day.

Hey : Here's Dr. Anthony Fauci (you may have heard of him) saying that lockdowns will continue until there are "essentially no new cases, no deaths for a period of time..." and "the ultimate game changer in this will be a vaccine."

> Henry Blodget @hblodget
> Yes, permanent lockdowns would be a disaster. Is anyone actually calling for that? (Honest question. I have not heard that.)

1:06 PM 29%

cdc.gov

NVSS National Vital Statistics System

COVID-19 Alert No. 2
March 24, 2020

New ICD code introduced for COVID-19 deaths
This email is to alert you that a newly-introduced ICD code has been implemented to accurately capture mortality data for Coronavirus Disease 2019 (COVID-19) on death certificates.

Please read carefully and forward this email to the state statistical staff in your office who are involved in the preparation of mortality data, as well as others who may receive questions when the data are released.

What is the new code?
The new ICD code for Coronavirus Disease 2019 (COVID-19) is U07.1, and below is how it will appear in formal tabular list format.

U07.1 COVID-19
Excludes: Coronavirus infection, unspecified site (B34.2)
Severe acute respiratory syndrome [SARS], unspecified (U04.9)

The WHO has provided a second code, U07.2, for clinical or epidemiological diagnosis of COVID-19 where a laboratory confirmation is inconclusive or not available. Because laboratory test results are not typically reported on death certificates in the U.S., NCHS is not planning to implement U07.2 for mortality statistics.

When will it be implemented?
Immediately.

Will COVID-19 be the underlying cause?
The underlying cause depends upon what and where conditions are reported on the death certificate. However, the rules for coding and selection of the underlying cause of death are expected to result in COVID-19 being the underlying cause more often than not.

What happens if certifiers report terms other than the suggested terms?
If a death certificate reports coronavirus without identifying a specific strain or explicitly specifying that it is not COVID-19, NCHS will ask the states to follow up to verify whether or not the coronavirus was COVID-19.

Immediately.

Will COVID-19 be the underlying cause?
The underlying cause depends upon what and where conditions are reported on the death certificate. However, the rules for coding and selection of the underlying cause of death are expected to result in COVID-19 being the underlying cause more often than not.

What happens if certifiers report terms other than the suggested terms?
If a death certificate reports coronavirus without identifying a specific strain or explicitly specifying that it is not COVID-19, NCHS will ask the states to follow up to verify whether or not the coronavirus was COVID-19.

This is the @IMHE_UW model for #Covid_19, the new US standard. It was put out SIX days ago (post lockdown). It projects New York State will have 50,000 hospitalizations TODAY. Instead NYS has 12,000. Wrong by 4x in under a week. What on earth are we doing? covid19.healthdata.org/projections

The @IHME_UW model vs. reality for New York State, April 4: more of the same, 65,400 beds projected, 15,905 actually used (new hospitalizations fell notably day-over-day); 12,000 ICU beds projected, 4,100 used. Still basically fiction, but at least it's not getting MORE wrong.

The @IHME_UW model vs reality for New York State, April 5. The model is less accurate than ever. 69K beds projected, 16.5K actually needed; 12,346 ICU beds projected, 4376 needed. Even better (tho not for the model), overall bed count rose less than 600 statewide - less than 4%.

Cuomo when asked today about still needing 110k beds-"The number of beds doesn't really matter anymore. We have the beds. It's the ventilators, and then it's the staff." After going on about NY sharing v's from upstate to downstate, he admitted they haven't moved any yet.

5/ Then why did we put ourselves through all this pain?

Okay, so people who are paying attention are relatively aware of this factor.

But there's another issue - and, perversely, it is driven by the fact that:

The lockdowns don't really work.

6/ What do I mean? Tens of millions of people are essential workers; tens of millions more are going outside all the time. Western-style lockdowns are just not hard enough to reduce R much below 1 (you'd need to force people to shut in and have the military supply to get there).

7/ What this means is that, say, in a region where 1.5% of people were actively infected in mid-March, the virus is still quietly spreading at roughly that pace every week. Which means that in a month another 6% of people should be infected, assuming R is roughly flat...

1/ As you sit home watching #COVID death counts spiral, please know the official @CDCgov guidance for coding COVID-related deaths is as follows: any death where the disease "caused or is assumed to have caused or contributed to death." Confirmed lab tests are not required...

cdc.gov

NVSS National Vital Statistics System

COVID-19 Alert No. 2
March 24, 2020

New ICD code introduced for COVID-19 deaths
This email is to alert you that a newly-introduced ICD code has been implemented to accurately capture mortality data for Coronavirus Disease 2019 (COVID-19) on death certificates.

Please read carefully and forward this email to the state statistical staff in your office who are involved in the preparation of mortality data, as well as others who may receive questions when the data are released.

What is the new code?
The new ICD code for Coronavirus Disease 2019 (COVID-19) is U07.1, and below is how it will appear in formal tabular list format.

U07.1 COVID-19
Excludes: Coronavirus infection, unspecified site (B34.2)
Severe acute respiratory syndrome [SARS], unspecified (U04.9)

The WHO has provided a second code, U07.2, for clinical or epidemiological diagnosis of COVID-19 where a laboratory confirmation is inconclusive or not available. Because laboratory test results are not typically reported on death certificates in the U.S., NCHS is not planning to implement U07.2 for mortality statistics.

When will it be implemented?
Immediately.

Will COVID-19 be the underlying cause?
The underlying cause depends upon what and where conditions are reported on the death certificate. However, the rules for coding and selection of the underlying cause of death are expected to result in COVID-19 being the underlying cause more often than not.

What happens if certifiers report terms other than the suggested terms?
If a death certificate reports coronavirus without identifying a specific strain or explicitly specifying that it is not COVID-19, NCHS will ask the states to follow up to verify whether or not the coronavirus was COVID-19.

The [illegible] model vs. reality for New York State, April 4: more of the same, 65,400 beds projected, 15,905 actually used (new hospitalizations fell notably day-over-day); 12,000 ICU beds projected, 4,100 used. Still basically fiction, but at least it's not getting MORE wrong.

Alex Berenson
@AlexBerenson

Reminder: this model and its friend from @imperialcollege are two of the main reasons that schools are closed, the economy is in free fall, and people who go outside to paddleboard are being arrested (!).

Is it too late to cancel the ventilator orders? As furniture goes they're pretty expensive. And not that attractive.

...that featured using ventilators and other equipment to Gov. Andrew Cuomo's plan to take unused supplies may not have as much to worry about.

"We're not in the position that we were in," Cuomo said today during a press briefing in Albany.

He had said Friday he planned to sign an executive ordering requiring hospitals to give up unused ventilators and other medical gear. He said he would to deploy the National Guard to collect the supplies and redistribute them to hospitals stressed by the coronavirus pandemic in the New York City area.

3/ Only Ohio didn't actually issue a lockdown order until Monday, March 23. Yes, lockdowns are such magic that they can PREVENT (theoretical) peaks that occurred before they were issued...

DeWine stated that the ODH website would have more information when it was available.

during his daily news conference to update the spread of the COVID-19 coronavirus, stating that ODH Director Dr. Amy Acton has signed the order.

"There is really nothing in that order, that we have not already been talking about," said DeWine. "There's nothing in that order, that I have not been asking you to do for the last week or so."

The order goes into effect at 11:59 p.m. Monday and will go until at least April 6. Then it will be reevaluated, according to DeWine.

during his daily news conference to update the spread of the COVID-19 coronavirus, stating that ODH Director Dr. Amy Acton has signed the order.

"There is really nothing in that order, that we have not already been talking about," said DeWine. "There's nothing in that order, that I have not been asking you to do for the last week or so."

The order goes into effect at 11:59 p.m. Monday and will go until at least April 6. Then it will be reevaluated, according to DeWine.

We are now at a new stage. I @DrAmyActon just signed a statewide #StayHome order for Ohioans.

@GovMikeDeWine

#StayHomeOhio: It does permit exceptions to staying home. Common sense exceptions: leaving for health and safety, for necessary supplies and services, for outdoor activity (walking your dog, going to a park -- although playgrounds are closed).

DeWine stated that the ODH website would have more information when it was available.

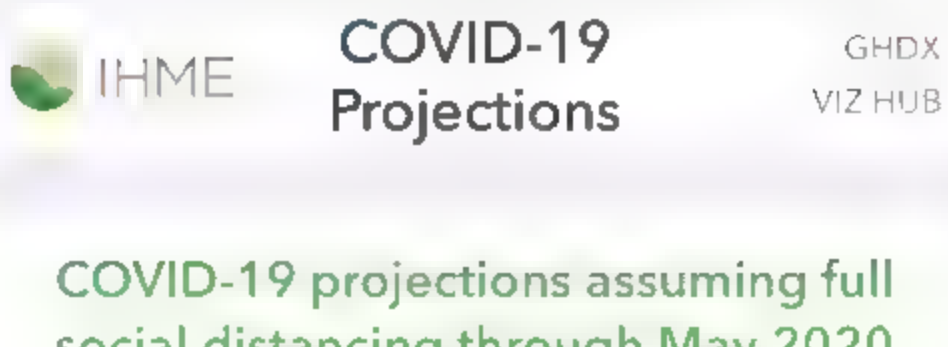
Time to start using more straightforward language and calling out people who don't tell the truth, like @pbump. The original model explicitly accounted for the effect of lockdowns. It was wrong in real-time, embarrassingly so; that's why it's been updated. (It's still wrong.)



Philip Bump @pbump
A notable shift downward in projected deaths from coronavirus is already being spun as "experts were wrong!!" Instead of "hey, the thing experts said would drive down deaths might be driving down deaths."

New German data show that 15 percent of people in one region have already been infected with CV (remember - more infections is good news, it means the virus is less dangerous) and the fatality rate is 0.37%.

The 250-bed facility, for which setup began on March 30, was intended to help Washington state's health care system tend to non Covid-19 patients in the event of a hospital surge.

But just three days after announcing the facility was ready to receive patients, officials say they're returning the hospital to the federal government.

The action is aimed at helping another state with a more significant need for hospital capacity at this time, according to the Governor's Office. The facility did not see any patients during the time it was slated to operate in Seattle.

5/ One last point here: Ferguson gives the lockdown credit, which is interesting - the UK only began ita lockdown 2 days ago, and the theory is that lockdowns take 2 weeks or more to work.

1/ As you sit home watching #COVID death counts spiral, please know the official @CDCgov guidance for coding COVID-related deaths is as follows: any death where the disease “caused or is assumed to have caused or contributed to death.” Confirmed lab tests are not required...

cdc.gov

NVSS National Vital Statistics System

COVID-19 Alert No. 2
March 24, 2020

New ICD code introduced for COVID-19 deaths
This email is to alert you that a newly-introduced ICD code has been implemented to accurately capture mortality data for Coronavirus Disease 2019 (COVID-19) on death certificates.

Please read carefully and forward this email to the state statistical staff in your office who are involved in the preparation of mortality data, as well as others who may receive questions when the data are released.

What is the new code?
The new ICD code for Coronavirus Disease 2019 (COVID-19) is U07.1, and below is how it will appear in formal tabular list format.

U07.1 COVID-19
Excludes: Coronavirus infection, unspecified site (B34.2)
Severe acute respiratory syndrome [SARS], unspecified (U04.9)

The WHO has provided a second code, U07.2, for clinical or epidemiological diagnosis of COVID-19 where a laboratory confirmation is inconclusive or not available. Because laboratory test results are not typically reported on death certificates in the U.S., NCHS is not planning to implement U07.2 for mortality statistics.

When will it be implemented?
Immediately.

Will COVID-19 be the underlying cause?
The underlying cause depends upon what and where conditions are reported on the death certificate. However, the rules for coding and selection of the underlying cause of death are expected to result in COVID-19 being the underlying cause more often than not.

What happens if certifiers report terms other than the suggested terms?
If a death certificate reports coronavirus without identifying a specific strain or explicitly specifying that it is not COVID-19, NCHS will ask the states to follow up to verify whether or not the coronavirus was COVID-19.

The @[redacted] model vs. reality for New York State, April 4: more of the same, 65,400 beds projected, 15,905 actually used (new hospitalizations fell notably day-over-day); 12,000 ICU beds projected, 4,100 used. Still basically fiction, but at least it's not getting MORE wrong.

So @NYGovCuomo has reported ICU patients and discharges for weeks. Not today. Just new hospitalizations - which are now 2/5 what they were a week ago - and deaths (a lagging indicator, as he said). I wonder why. And, oh yeah, a promise NY won't go back to normal anytime soon.

1/ #COVID—19 is devastating hospitals and employees nationally. But not for the reason you think. They are empty - prepared for a surge that has not come - and burning cash. An executive reports his group's stronger hospitals have "months" of cash; the weaker ones have "weeks."

> about 15 other CFOs
> - Seeing decline in volume about 40% and similar revenue cut – his low was about 50% cut in volume but only about 2-5% COVID
> - Outpatient basically is a zero
> - Only exception is hot spots which have a lot of volume but much lower revenue and higher cost because of PPE
> - A reasonable way to think about it is down 40-60% at the peak
> - No one expects to recapture everything they lost
> - Staff
>   - Not flexing yet
>   - Post spike in likely have to make some adjustments
>   - Could take 40% off of earnings and need to reduce staffing by 10% but not close to enough
> - Longer term impact

1/ Let's talk more about the magic of "social distancing": yesterday the Ohio governor said it had reduced the state's projected peak daily cases from 62,000 to 1,600. Awesome! But let's take a closer look, shall we?

"There is really nothing in that order, that we have not already been talking about," said DeWine. "There's nothing in that order, that I have not been asking you to do for the last week or so."

The order goes into effect at 11:59 p.m. Monday and will go until at least April 6. Then it will be reevaluated, according to DeWine.

Addendum: People have pointed out the April data are very new and may still change. True, though the report also says "deaths reported to the Michigan Vital Records office may be delayed by 7 days" (it's May 8) and the state looks to have been very quick about coding recently...

My point is really twofold. Yes, #COVID has driven an increase in all-cause mortality (about 0.02 to 0.03% of the state's population in April, but still real). At the same time it is hard to make a case for massive (or any) undercounting of #COVID deaths based on this.

Good points...I also think it's worth waiting until end of 2020/21 and see what numbers look like. We know that many death particularly in Italy were of people with underlying issues. Their deaths, while unfortunate, were probably brought forward by months due to Covid.

He appears to practice emergency medicine in Toledo. He is licensed in Ohio.

Obviously, I don't believe for one second that his region is unable to test all symptomatic patients -- as Ohio is testing 8,000 per day (on average).

Hey @hblodget: Here's Dr. Anthony Fauci (you may have heard of him) saying that lockdowns will continue until there are "essentially no new cases, no deaths for a period of time..." and "the ultimate game changer in this will be a vaccine."

People have not paid nearly enough attention (yet) to the absurdity of the proposed standards for relaxing the phases in lockdown states... or the strong hints that schools will not be back normally in the fall... or the aggressiveness of the test-trace proposals.

I don't understand the endgame of the public health community here, especially with the epidemic apparently waning and the free states seeing little if any evidence of a second wave; but then much of the last month has puzzled me (the politics, not the course of the epidemic)

This is doubly dangerous because it means many super-rich are happily holed up in the Hamptons or Fisher Island or even further afield instead of pressuring the White House and state governments to save the economy.

1/ As you sit home watching #COVID death counts spiral, please know the official @CDCgov guidance for coding COVID-related deaths is as follows: any death where the disease "caused or is assumed to have caused or contributed to death." Confirmed lab tests are not required...

cdc.gov

NVSS National Vital Statistics System

COVID-19 Alert No. 2
March 24, 2020

New ICD code introduced for COVID-19 deaths
This email is to alert you that a newly introduced ICD code has been implemented to accurately capture mortality data for Coronavirus Disease 2019 (COVID-19) on death certificates.

Please read carefully and forward this email to the state statistical staff in your office who are involved in the preparation of mortality data, as well as others who may receive questions when the data are released.

What is the new code?
The new ICD code for Coronavirus Disease 2019 (COVID-19) is U07.1, and below is how it will appear in formal tabular list format.

U07.1 COVID-19
Excludes: Coronavirus infection, unspecified site (B34.2)
Severe acute respiratory syndrome [SARS], unspecified (U04.9)

The WHO has provided a second code, U07.2, for clinical or epidemiological diagnosis of COVID-19 where a laboratory confirmation is inconclusive or not available. Because laboratory test results are not typically reported on death certificates in the U.S., NCHS is not planning to implement U07.2 for mortality statistics.

When will it be implemented?
Immediately.

Will COVID-19 be the underlying cause?
The underlying cause depends upon what and where conditions are reported on the death certificate. However, the rules for coding and selection of the underlying cause of death are expected to result in COVID-19 being the underlying cause more often than not.

What happens if certifiers report terms other than the suggested terms?
If a death certificate reports coronavirus without identifying a specific strain or explicitly specifying that it is not COVID-19, NCHS will ask the states to follow up to verify whether or not the coronavirus was COVID-19.

The @IHME_UW model vs. reality for New York State, April 4: more of the same, 65,400 beds projected, 15,905 actually used (new hospitalizations fell notably day-over-day); 12,000 ICU beds projected, 4,100 used. Still basically fiction, but at least it's not getting MORE wrong.

1/ Now California is sending back extra ventilators too... As I mentioned a couple weeks ago, any new ventilators we build at this point will likely be very expensive furniture. We don't have the docs and nurses to run them and we don't need them anyway:

2/ One would think the fact all three West Coast states have decided they don't need more of the most crucial piece of equipment in treating serious #CV cases would lead reporters to ask hard questions about the projected course of the epidemic - and lockdowns. One would think.

From Minnesota. The median age of the 29 people there who died from #COVID? 86. Including a 69-year-old who had just gone through a double lung transplant.

17 of the 29 lived in long-term care facilities.

Minnesota remains on indefinite lockdown.

1/ "There are at most 200K ventilators in the US. One million are expected to be needed." This horrifying news comes from my old employer [illegible]; it's sourced to the Society of Critical Care Medicine.

Only the SCCM didn't say that. At all. Let's see what it did say...

> There are at most 200k ventilators in the US. One million are expected to be needed. Experts say the Trump administration approach - let states fend for themselves in the market rather than a central authority step in - will doom people to die. nytimes.com/2020/03/25/hea…

2/ The number comes from a March 19 SCCM paper:

"[One estimate is that 1/2 of] ICU admissions (960,000) would require ventilatory support. Such projections are gross estimates."

More importantly: this is everyone who may need ventilation OVER THE COURSE OF THE EPIDEMIC...

1/ As you sit home watching #COVID death counts spiral, please know the official @CDCgov guidance for coding COVID-related deaths is as follows: any death where the disease "caused or is assumed to have caused or contributed to death." Confirmed lab tests are not required...

cdc.gov

NVSS National Vital Statistics System

COVID-19 Alert No. 2
March 24, 2020

New ICD code introduced for COVID-19 deaths
This email is to alert you that a newly-introduced ICD code has been implemented to accurately capture mortality data for Coronavirus Disease 2019 (COVID-19) on death certificates.

Please read carefully and forward this email to the state statistical staff in your office who are involved in the preparation of mortality data, as well as others who may receive questions when the data are released.

What is the new code?
The new ICD code for Coronavirus Disease 2019 (COVID-19) is U07.1, and below is how it will appear in formal tabular list format.

U07.1 COVID-19
Excludes: Coronavirus infection, unspecified site (B34.2)
Severe acute respiratory syndrome [SARS], unspecified (U04.9)

The WHO has provided a second code, U07.2, for clinical or epidemiological diagnosis of COVID-19 where a laboratory confirmation is inconclusive or not available. Because laboratory test results are not typically reported on death certificates in the U.S., NCHS is not planning to implement U07.2 for mortality statistics.

When will it be implemented?
Immediately.

Will COVID-19 be the underlying cause?
The underlying cause depends upon what and where conditions are reported on the death certificate. However, the rules for coding and selection of the underlying cause of death are expected to result in COVID-19 being the underlying cause more often than not.

What happens if certifiers report terms other than the suggested terms?
If a death certificate reports coronavirus without identifying a specific strain or explicitly specifying that it is not COVID-19, NCHS will ask the states to follow up to verify whether or not the coronavirus was COVID-19.

The @[illegible] model vs. reality for New York State, April 4: more of the same, 65,400 beds projected, 15,905 actually used (new hospitalizations fell notably day-over-day); 12,000 ICU beds projected, 4,100 used. Still basically fiction, but at least it's not getting MORE wrong.

Reminder: this model and its friend from [illegible] are two of the main reasons that schools are closed, the economy is in free fall, and people who go outside to paddleboard are being arrested (!).

The @IHME_UW model vs reality for New York State, April 5. The model is less accurate than ever. 69K beds projected, 16.5K actually needed; 12,346 ICU beds projected, 4376 needed. Even better (tho not for the model), overall bed count rose less than 600 statewide - less than 4%.

Cuomo when asked today about still needing 110k beds-"The number of beds doesn't really matter anymore. We have the beds. It's the ventilators, and then it's the staff." After going on about NY sharing v's from upstate to downstate, he admitted they haven't moved any yet.

Here is the newly updated mIHME_UW model with predictions for NY state today (which doesn't need to be predicted, as it's already happened). And here's the actual data from today. As you can see, the NEW model can't even get today right.

Expect it to NOT be over, because social capital has been bet.
- Doubling downs
- Claims of "success!" for the lockdowns
- Jeers at the "deniers" for almost killing everyone

The hysteria will remain, and probably find its way into the history books as truth.

1/ Now California is sending back extra ventilators too... As I mentioned a couple weeks ago, any new ventilators we build at this point will likely be very expensive furniture. We don't have the docs and nurses to run them and we don't need them anyway:

2/ One would think the fact all three West Coast states have decided they don't need more of the most crucial piece of equipment in treating serious #CV cases would lead reporters to ask hard questions about the projected course of the epidemic - and lockdowns. One would think.

that feared losing ventilators and other equipment to Gov. Andrew Cuomo's plan to take unused supplies may not have as much to worry about.

"We're not in the position that we were in," Cuomo said today during a press briefing in Albany.

He had said Friday he planned to sign an executive ordering requiring hospitals to give up unused ventilators and other medical gear. He said he would to deploy the National Guard to collect the supplies and redistribute them to hospitals stressed by the coronavirus pandemic in the New York City area.

1/ #COVID-19 is devastating hospitals and employees nationally. But not for the reason you think. They are empty - prepared for a surge that has not come - and burning cash. An executive reports his group's stronger hospitals have "months" of cash; the weaker ones have "weeks."

about 15 other CFOs

- Seeing decline in volume about 40% and similar revenue cut – his low was about 50% cut in volume but only about 2-5% COVID
- Outpatient basically is a zero
- Only exception is hot spots which have a lot of volume but much lower revenue and higher cost because of PPE
- A reasonable way to think about it is down 40-60% at the peak
- No one expects to recapture everything they lost
- Staff
  - Not flexing yet
  - Post spike in likely have to make some adjustments
  - Could take 40% off of earnings and need to reduce staffing by 10% but not close to enough
- Longer term impact

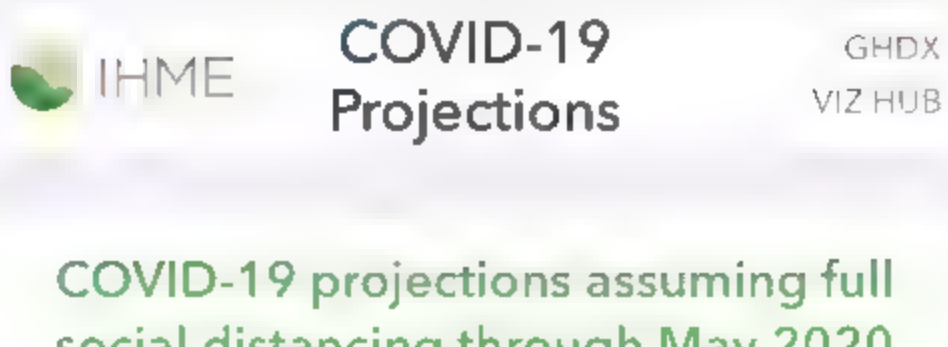
Time to start using more straightforward language and calling out people who don't tell the truth, like @pbump. The original model explicitly accounted for the effect of lockdowns. It was wrong in real-time, embarrassingly so; that's why it's been updated. (It's still wrong.)



Philip Bump ✓ @pbump
A notable shift downward in projected deaths from coronavirus is already being spun as "experts were wrong!!" instead of "hey, the thing experts said would drive down deaths might be driving down deaths."

it's as if MSM is willfully ignorant of the difference between social distancing and complete lockdown; a supposed statewide "lock down" went into effect here in GA last Friday, after the heat just became too much for our governor, but almost nothing changed!

Nobody says COVID-19 is not real, that it can't tax hospitals or kill people, esp. if they are over 75 or have comorbidities. But right now the best CURRENT projection is for 61,000 US deaths. That was the 2017 flu season. Why have we shut the country?

1/ So I don't want to go too far down the hole of arguing about #COVID death counts, but a reader pointed out a very odd change to the way Massachusetts is reporting deaths. Until April 6, the state reported deaths by day - that day, it reported 29. See below..

Long-Term Care Facilities Reporting At Least One Case of COVID-19	119
Hospitalization
Patient was hospitalized	1241
Patient was not hospitalized	3942
Under investigation	8654

These data are cumulative and current as of April 6, 2020 at 12:30PM
*Reflects improved facility definitions and data collection. These include positive cases at nursing homes, rest homes, and skilled nursing facilities

COVID-19 Alert No. 2
March 24, 2020

New ICD code introduced for COVID-19 deaths
This email is to alert you that a newly-introduced ICD code has been implemented to accurately capture mortality data for Coronavirus Disease 2019 (COVID-19) on death certificates.

Please read carefully and forward this email to the state statistical staff in your office who are involved in the preparation of mortality data, as well as others who may receive questions when the data are released.

What is the new code?
The new ICD code for Coronavirus Disease 2019 (COVID-19) is U07.1, and below is how it will appear in tabular list format.

U07.1 COVID-19
Excludes: Coronavirus infection, unspecified site (B34.2)
Severe acute respiratory syndrome [SARS], unspecified (U04.9)

The WHO has provided a second code, U07.2, for clinical or epidemiological diagnosis of COVID-19 where a laboratory confirmation is inconclusive or not available. Because laboratory test results are not typically reported on death certificates in the U.S., NCHS is not planning to implement U07.2 for mortality statistics.

When will it be implemented?
Immediately.

Will COVID-19 be the underlying cause?
The underlying cause depends upon what and where conditions are reported on the death certificate. However, the rules for coding and selection of the underlying cause of death are expected to result in COVID-19 being the underlying cause more often than not.

What happens if certifiers report terms other than the suggested terms?
If a death certificate reports coronavirus without identifying a specific strain or explicitly specifying that it is not COVID-19, NCHS will ask the states to follow up to verify whether or not the coronavirus was COVID-19.

The @IHME_UW model vs. reality for New York State, April 4: more of the same, 65,400 beds projected, 15,905 actually used (new hospitalizations fell notably day-over-day); 12,000 ICU beds projected, 4,100 used. Still basically fiction, but at least it's not getting MORE wrong.

The @IHME_UW model vs reality for New York State, April 5. The model is less accurate than ever. 69K beds projected, 16.5K actually needed; 12,346 ICU beds projected, 4376 needed. Even better (tho not for the model), overall bed count rose less than 600 statewide - less than 4%.

From Minnesota. The median age of the 29 people there who died from #COVID? 86. Including a 69-year-old who had just gone through a double lung transplant.

17 of the 29 lived in long-term care facilities.

Minnesota remains on indefinite lockdown.

I saw that in Cuomo yesterday. Plus, Trump has his fingers all over this mess. He failed to follow his gut and instead listened to these doctors who have not treated a patient in decades. What a debacle they caused.

I worked for Nielsen Media and they have "random" models that are very capable of doing this with a great deal of accuracy. They work in a multi billion dollar industry where absolute accurately counts.

So @NYGovCuomo has reported ICU patients and discharges for weeks. Not today. Just new hospitalizations - which are now 2/5 what they were a week ago - and deaths (a lagging indicator, as he said). I wonder why. And, oh yeah, a promise NY won't go back to normal anytime soon.

1/ #COVID-19 is devastating hospitals and employees nationally. But not for the reason you think. They are empty - prepared for a surge that has not come - and burning cash. An executive reports his group's stronger hospitals have "months" of cash; the weaker ones have "weeks."

- Seeing decline in volume about 40% and similar revenue cut – his low was about 50% cut in volume but only about 2-5% COVID
- Outpatient basically is a zero
- Only exception is hot spots which have a lot of volume but much lower revenue and higher cost because of PPE
- A reasonable way to think about it is down 40-60% at the peak
- No one expects to recapture everything they lost
- Staff

3/ Only Ohio didn't actually issue a lockdown order until Monday, March 23. Yes, lockdowns are such magic that they can PREVENT (theoretical) peaks that occurred before they were issued...

during his daily news conference to update the spread of the COVID-19 coronavirus, stating that ODH Director Dr. Amy Acton has signed the order.

"There is really nothing in that order, that we have not already been talking about," said DeWine. "There's nothing in that order, that I have not been asking you to do for the last week or so."

The order goes into effect at 11:59 p.m. Monday and will go until at least April 6. Then it will be reevaluated, according to DeWine.

DeWine stated that the ODH website would have more information when it was available.

Time to start using more straightforward language and calling out people who don't tell the truth, like @pbump. The original model explicitly accounted for the effect of lockdowns. It was wrong in real-time, embarrassingly so; that's why it's been updated. (It's still wrong.)

Philip Bump @pbump
A notable shift downward in projected deaths from coronavirus is already being spun as "experts were wrong!!" Instead of "hey, the thing experts said would drive down deaths might be driving down deaths."

it's as if MSM is willfully ignorant of the difference between social distancing and complete lockdown; a supposed statewide "lock down" went into effect here in GA last Friday, after the heat just became too much for our governor, but almost nothing changed!

field hospital deployed to CenturyLink Field Event Center to the U.S. Department of Defense.

The 250-bed facility, for which setup began on March 30, was intended to help Washington state's health care system tend to non Covid-19 patients in the event of a hospital surge.

But just three days after announcing the facility was ready to receive patients, officials say they're returning the hospital to the federal government.

The action is aimed at helping another state with a more significant need for hospital capacity at this time, according to the Governor's Office. The facility did not see any patients during the time it was slated to operate in Seattle.

1/ I'm going to try to explain this once more for all the blue-checks insisting that they KNOW lockdowns work.

The models failed. In real time. Even in NY state, the April 1 iteration of [illegible] model estimated four times the hospitalizations last week as were taking place.

Alex Berenson
@AlexBerenson

2/ But it's crucial to understand WHY they failed.

There is a TIME LAG between infection, symptoms, hospitalization, ICU care, and death. 5 days on average from infection to symptoms, several more days to hospitalization, 2-3 more to ICU care. These are averages, but correct.

3/ The models assumed (not unreasonably) that in places like New York, lockdowns had come TOO LATE. Between March 17 and March 25, hospitalizations in NY rose 7X. The models assumed that because of the time lag, the rise would go on UNTIL THE EFFECTS OF THE LOCKDOWN KICKED IN...

5/ BUT THE MODELS WERE WRONG. After March 25, new hospitalizations remained roughly flat in NY for the next 10 days. Now they have plunged. That's why the overflow in NYC is basically empty. (Outside NY, the trends are similar, and it doesn't matter when the lockdowns started.)

12 169 609

Alex Berenson
@AlexBerenson

6/ Now, there are several possible reasonable arguments around this, including that voluntary social distancing had some effect before the lockdown. And there's a much broader question as to what is happening right now in Spain and Italy – or Japan, or Sweden.

7/ But before we can have that debate, everyone needs to underestimate that the models didn't fail last week because they UNDERESTIMATED the effect of the lockdowns. They failed because they OVERESTIMATED the effect. Anyone who says otherwise just doesn't understand the lag.

1/ So I don't want to go too far down the hole of arguing about #COVID death counts, but a reader pointed out a very odd change to the way Massachusetts is reporting deaths. Until April 6, the state reported deaths by day - that day, it reported 29. See below..

Long-Term Care Facilities Reporting At Least One Case of COVID-19	119
Hospitalization
Patient was hospitalized	1241
Patient was not hospitalized	3942
Under investigation	8654

These data are cumulative and current as of April 6, 2020 at 12:30PM
*Reflects improved facility definitions and data collection. These include positive cases at nursing homes, rest homes, and skilled nursing facilities

National Vital Statistics System

COVID-19 Alert No. 2
March 24, 2020

New ICD code introduced for COVID-19 deaths
This email is to alert you that a newly-introduced ICD code has been implemented to accurately capture mortality data for Coronavirus Disease 2019 (COVID-19) on death certificates.

Please read carefully and forward this email to the state statistical staff in your office who are involved in the preparation of mortality data, as well as others who may receive questions when the data are released.

What is the new code?
The new ICD code for Coronavirus Disease 2019 (COVID-19) is U07.1, and below is how it will appear in formal tabular list format.

U07.1 COVID-19
Excludes: Coronavirus infection, unspecified site (B34.2)
Severe acute respiratory syndrome (SARS), unspecified (U04.9)

The WHO has provided a second code, U07.2, for clinical or epidemiological diagnosis of COVID-19 where a laboratory confirmation is inconclusive or not available. Because laboratory test results are not typically reported on death certificates in the U.S., NCHS is not planning to implement U07.2 for mortality statistics.

When will it be implemented?
Immediately.

Will COVID-19 be the underlying cause?
The underlying cause depends upon what and where conditions are reported on the death certificate. However, the rules for coding and selection of the underlying cause of death are expected to result in COVID-19 being the underlying cause more often than not.

What happens if certifiers report terms other than the suggested terms?
If a death certificate reports coronavirus without identifying a specific strain or explicitly specifying that it is not COVID-19, NCHS will ask the states to follow up to verify whether or not the coronavirus was COVID-19.

2/ And, btw, other possibly relevant factors, like, oh, COPD, are considered secondary. The rules “are expected to result in COVID-19 being the underlying cause more often than not.”

The @IHME_UW model vs. reality for New York State, April 4: more of the same, 65,400 beds projected, 15,905 actually used (new hospitalizations fell notably day-over-day); 12,000 ICU beds projected, 4,100 used. Still basically fiction, but at least it's not getting MORE wrong.

1/ [illegible] appears to have updated its model: It has cut the number of hospital beds needed for [illegible] patients on the peak of April by 45% - from 262,000 to 141,000 and ICU beds by 26% - from almost 39,700 to 29,200. Yet deaths remain almost the same, around 80,000...

2/ Unfortunately, though the model updated just now, its projections remain inaccurate for actual use TODAY: for example, it predicts New York state on April 5 will need 24,000 beds and 6,000 ICU beds, about 1/3 more than the actual usage today. Not sure what to say about this...

3/ Only Ohio didn't actually issue a lockdown order until Monday, March 23. Yes, lockdowns are such magic that they can PREVENT (theoretical) peaks that occurred before they were issued...

during his daily news conference to update the spread of the COVID-19 coronavirus, stating that ODH Director Dr. Amy Acton has signed the order.

"There is really nothing in that order, that we have not already been talking about," said DeWine. "There's nothing in that order, that I have not been asking you to do for the last week or so."

The order goes into effect at 11:59 p.m. Monday and will go until at least April 6. Then it will be reevaluated, according to DeWine.

We are now at a new stage. #DrAmyActon just signed a statewide #StayHome order for Ohioans.

Governor Mike DeWine
@GovMikeDeWine

#StayHomeOhio: It does permit exceptions to staying home. Common sense exceptions: leaving for health and safety, for necessary supplies and services, for outdoor activity (walking your dog, going to a park -- although playgrounds are closed).

1,042 2:27 PM - Mar 22, 2020

886 people are talking about this

DeWine stated that the ODH website would have more information when it was available.

Time to start using more straightforward language and calling out people who don't tell the truth, like @pbump. The original model explicitly accounted for the effect of lockdowns. It was wrong in real-time, embarrassingly so; that's why it's been updated. (It's still wrong.)

Philip Bump @pbump
A notable shift downward in projected deaths from coronavirus is already being spun as "experts were wrong!!" Instead of "hey, the thing experts said would drive down deaths might be driving down deaths."

it's as if MSM is willfully ignorant of the difference between social distancing and complete lockdown; a supposed statewide "lock down" went into effect here in GA last Friday, after the heat just became too much for our governor, but almost nothing changed!

Wow. So this is a non-random sample and only one data point, but at a testing site in Chicago 30-50% of people are testing positive for CV antibodies (meaning they have already had the virus). WE NEED WIDESPREAD ANTIBODY TESTING.

Roseland Hospital phlebotomist: 30% of those tested have coronavirus antibody

Community Hospital said Thursday that 30% to 50% of patients tested for the coronavirus have antibodies while only around 10% to 20% of those tested have the active virus.

Sumaya Owaynat, a phlebotomy technician, said she tests between 500 and 600 patients on an average day in the parking lot at Roseland Community Hospital. Drive-thru testing is from 9 a.m. to noon and 2 to 5 p.m. each day. However, the hospital has a limited number of tests they can give per day.

6/ Final point: the paper concludes the real bottleneck is in trained staff and "priority should focus not only on increasing [ventilators]... but on growing the number of trained professionals."

But I guess bashing the WH for not nationalizing ventilator production is more fun.

COVID-19 Alert No. 2
March 24, 2020

New ICD code introduced for COVID-19 deaths
This email is to alert you that a newly-introduced ICD code has been implemented to accurately capture mortality data for Coronavirus Disease 2019 (COVID-19) on death certificates.

Please read carefully and forward this email to the state statistical staff in your office who are involved in the preparation of mortality data, as well as others who may receive questions when the data are released.

What is the new code?
The new ICD code for Coronavirus Disease 2019 (COVID-19) is U07.1, and below is how it will appear in formal tabular list format.

U07.1 COVID-19
Excludes: Coronavirus infection, unspecified site (B34.2)
Severe acute respiratory syndrome [SARS], unspecified (U04.9)

The WHO has provided a second code, U07.2, for clinical or epidemiological diagnosis of COVID-19 where a laboratory confirmation is inconclusive or not available. Because laboratory test results are not typically reported on death certificates in the U.S., NCHS is not planning to implement U07.2 for mortality statistics.

When will it be implemented?
Immediately.

Will COVID-19 be the underlying cause?
The underlying cause depends upon what and where conditions are reported on the death certificate. However, the rules for coding and selection of the underlying cause of death are expected to result in COVID-19 being the underlying cause more often than not.

What happens if certifiers report terms other than the suggested terms?
If a death certificate reports coronavirus without identifying a specific strain or explicitly specifying that it is not COVID-19, NCHS will ask the states to follow up to verify whether or not the coronavirus was COVID-19.

This is the @IMHE_UW model for #Covid_19, the new US standard. It was put out SIX days ago (post lockdown). It projects New York State will have 50,000 hospitalizations TODAY. Instead NYS has 12,000. Wrong by 4x in under a week. What on earth are we doing?

covid19.healthdata.org/projections

The charts below show projected hospital resource use based on COVID-19 deaths. The model assumes continued social distancing until the end of May 2020.

In locations without social distancing measures currently in place, we have assumed they will be in place within seven days of the last model update. If not, the number of deaths and burden on their hospital systems will likely be higher than the model predicts.

For answers to other frequently asked questions about the modeling, ...

The @IHME_UW model vs reality for New York State, April 5. The model is less accurate than ever. 69K beds projected, 16.5K actually needed; 12,346 ICU beds projected, 4376 needed. Even better (tho not for the model), overall bed count rose less than 600 statewide - less than 4%.

The @IHME_UW model vs reality for New York State, April 5. The model is less accurate than ever. 69K beds projected, 16.5K actually needed; 12,346 ICU beds projected, 4376 needed. Even better (tho not for the model), overall bed count rose less than 600 statewide - less than 4%.

Cuomo when asked today about still needing 110k beds-"The number of beds doesn't really matter anymore. We have the beds. It's the ventilators, and then it's the staff." After going on about NY sharing v's from upstate to downstate, he admitted they haven't moved any yet.

1/ [illegible] appears to have updated its model: It has cut the number of hospital beds needed for [illegible] patients on the peak of April by 45% - from 262,000 to 141,000 and ICU beds by 26% - from almost 39,700 to 29,200. Yet deaths remain almost the same, around 80,000...

2/ Unfortunately, though the model updated just now, its projections remain inaccurate for actual use TODAY: for example, it predicts New York state on April 5 will need 24,000 beds and 6,000 ICU beds, about 1/3 more than the actual usage today. Not sure what to say about this...

"There is really nothing in that order, that we have not already been talking about," said DeWine. "There's nothing in that order, that I have not been asking you to do for the last week or so."

The order goes into effect at 11:59 p.m. Monday and will go until at least April 6. Then it will be reevaluated, according to DeWine.

DeWine stated that the ODH website would have more information when it was available.

But just three days after announcing the facility was ready to receive patients, officials say they're returning the hospital to the federal government.

The action is aimed at helping another state with a more significant need for hospital capacity at this time, according to the Governor's Office. The facility did not see any patients during the time it was slated to operate in Seattle.

Couldn't agree more. I was always skeptical that this was a false alarm that the field hospital deployed to CenturyLink Field Event Center to the U.S. Department of Defense.

The 250-bed facility, for which setup began on March 30, was intended to help Washington state's health care system tend to non Covid-19 patients in the event of a hospital surge.

But just three days after announcing the facility was ready to receive patients, officials say they're returning the hospital to the federal government.

The action is aimed at helping another state with a more significant need for hospital capacity at this time, according to the Governor's Office. The facility did not see any patients during the time it was slated to operate in Seattle.

3/ The models assumed (not unreasonably) that in places like New York, lockdowns had come TOO LATE. Between March 17 and March 25, hospitalizations in NY rose 7X. The models assumed that because of the time lag, the rise would go on UNTIL THE EFFECTS OF THE LOCKDOWN KICKED IN...

4/ By that point, >5,000 new patients every day would need hospitalization - and ultimately New York would need 140,000 hospital beds and 30,000-40,000 ventilators. (Remember those numbers?)

5/ BUT THE MODELS WERE WRONG. After March 25, new hospitalizations remained roughly flat in NY for the next 10 days. Now they have plunged. That's why the overflow in NYC is basically empty. (Outside NY, the trends are similar, and it doesn't matter when the lockdowns started.)

6/ Now, there are several possible reasonable arguments around this, including that voluntary social distancing had some effect before the lockdown. And there's a much broader question as to what is happening right now in Spain and Italy – or Japan, or Sweden.

Attention citizens! Your Dept. Of Pandemia wishes to report that, contrary to your foolish speculation, it is not drunk on power. Not even tipsy. All citizens must stop saying so immediately. Those who do not will be arrested for their own protection. Attention citizens!

The @IHME_UW model vs reality for New York State, April 5. The model is less accurate than ever. 69K beds projected, 16.5K actually needed; 12,346 ICU beds projected, 4376 needed. Even better (tho not for the model), overall bed count rose less than 600 statewide - less than 4%.

Cuomo when asked today about still needing 110k beds-"The number of beds doesn't really matter anymore. We have the beds. It's the ventilators, and then it's the staff." After going on about NY sharing v's from upstate to downstate, he admitted they haven't moved any yet.

1/ … appears to have updated its model: It has cut the number of hospital beds needed for … patients on the peak of April by 45% - from 262,000 to 141,000 and ICU beds by 26% - from almost 39,700 to 29,200. Yet deaths remain almost the same, around 80,000...

2/ Unfortunately, though the model updated just now, its projections remain inaccurate for actual use TODAY: for example, it predicts New York state on April 5 will need 24,000 beds and 6,000 ICU beds, about 1/3 more than the actual usage today. Not sure what to say about this...

that feared losing ventilators and other equipment to Gov. Andrew Cuomo's plan to take unused supplies may not have as much to worry about.

"We're not in the position that we were in," Cuomo said today during a press briefing in Albany.

He had said Friday he planned to sign an executive ordering requiring hospitals to give up unused ventilators and other medical gear. He said he would to deploy the National Guard to collect the supplies and redistribute them to hospitals stressed by the coronavirus pandemic in the New York City area.

4/ By that point, >5,000 new patients every day would need hospitalization - and ultimately New York would need 140,000 hospital beds and 30,000-40,000 ventilators. (Remember those numbers?)

5/ BUT THE MODELS WERE WRONG. After March 25, new hospitalizations remained roughly flat in NY for the next 10 days. Now they have plunged. That's why the overflow in NYC is basically empty. (Outside NY, the trends are similar, and it doesn't matter when the lockdowns started.)

6/ Now, there are several possible reasonable arguments around this, including that voluntary social distancing had some effect before the lockdown. And there's a much broader question as to what is happening right now in Spain and Italy – or Japan, or Sweden.

Did the models for hospitalizations and deaths account for millions of hydroxychloroquine pills sent to NY and taken and work?

Not sure society has ever had a bigger gap between parents (esp. those who get the real ~0 risk of [illegible] for kids), who see the damage school closings and lost playdates do every day, and the childless, who appear happy to watch Netflix and eat takeout forever.

No way I'd even consider locking my kids inside. Our options have been limited but we have been getting outdoors every single day (even in the rain). If school doesn't resume in Ohio in the fall we will find a state where it is resuming and take our kids there

Interesting mortality data out of Michigan, home to one of the worst US #COVID epidemics outside NY. First, all-cause mortality did increase in April - that's the most deaths in 20+ years, and an increase of almost 30% over the previous April:

But I guess bashing the WH for not nationalizing ventilator production is more fun.

COVID-19 Alert No. 2
March 24, 2020

New ICD code introduced for COVID-19 deaths
This email is to alert you that a newly-introduced ICD code has been implemented to accurately capture mortality data for Coronavirus Disease 2019 (COVID-19) on death certificates.

Please read carefully and forward this email to the state statistical staff in your office who are involved in the preparation of mortality data, as well as others who may receive questions when the data are released.

What is the new code?
The new ICD code for Coronavirus Disease 2019 (COVID-19) is U07.1, and below is how it will appear in formal tabular list format.

U07.1 COVID-19
Excludes: Coronavirus infection, unspecified site (B34.2)
Severe acute respiratory syndrome [SARS], unspecified (U04.9)

The WHO has provided a second code, U07.2, for clinical or epidemiological diagnosis of COVID-19 where a laboratory confirmation is inconclusive or not available. Because laboratory test results are not typically reported on death certificates in the U.S., NCHS is not planning to implement U07.2 for mortality statistics.

When will it be implemented?
Immediately.

Will COVID-19 be the underlying cause?
The underlying cause depends upon what and where conditions are reported on the death certificate. However, the rules for coding and selection of the underlying cause of death are expected to result in COVID-19 being the underlying cause more often than not.

What happens if certifiers report terms other than the suggested terms?
If a death certificate reports coronavirus without identifying a specific strain or explicitly specifying that it is not COVID-19, NCHS will ask the states to follow up to verify whether or not the coronavirus was COVID-19.

When will it be implemented?
Immediately.

Will COVID-19 be the underlying cause?
The underlying cause depends upon what and where conditions are reported on the death certificate. However, the rules for coding and selection of the underlying cause of death are expected to result in COVID-19 being the underlying cause more often than not.

What happens if certifiers report terms other than the suggested terms?
If a death certificate reports coronavirus without identifying a specific strain or explicitly specifying that it is not COVID-19, NCHS will ask the states to follow up to verify whether or not the coronavirus was COVID-19.

2/ And, btw, other possibly relevant factors, like, oh, COPD, are considered secondary. The rules "are expected to result in COVID-19 being the underlying cause more often than not."

The @IHME_UW model vs. reality for New York State, April 4: more of the same, 65,400 beds projected, 15,905 actually used (new hospitalizations fell notably day-over-day); 12,000 ICU beds projected, 4,100 used. Still basically fiction, but at least it's not getting MORE wrong.

3/ Only Ohio didn't actually issue a lockdown order until Monday, March 23. Yes, lockdowns are such magic that they can PREVENT (theoretical) peaks that occurred before they were issued...

during his daily news conference to update the spread of the COVID-19 coronavirus, stating that ODH Director Dr. Amy Acton has signed the order.

"There is really nothing in that order, that we have not already been talking about," said DeWine. "There's nothing in that order, that I have not been asking you to do for the last week or so."

The order goes into effect at 11:59 p.m. Monday and will go until at least April 6. Then it will be reevaluated, according to DeWine.

We are now at a new stage. #DrAmyActon just signed a statewide #StayHome order for Ohioans.

Governor Mike DeWine
@GovMikeDeWine

#StayHomeOhio: It does permit exceptions to staying home. Common sense exceptions: leaving for health and safety, for necessary supplies and services, for outdoor activity (walking your dog, going to a park -- although playgrounds are closed).

1,342 2:23 PM · Mar 22, 2020

886 people are talking about this

DeWine stated that the ODH website would have more information when it was available.

As an Ohioian, I am so disgusted with how this whole thing has been handled. They bought Acton's "act" hook-line-and-sinker. When will DeWine realize that the stupid exec orders are no longer necessary & get Ohio back to work? Probably never, he is drunk on the praise over this!

This should be front-page news everywhere. Wonder why it's not.

New German data show that 15 percent of people in one region have already been infected with CV (remember - more infections is good news, it means the virus is less dangerous) and the fatality rate is 0.37%.

1/ I try to analyze dispassionately. But I will admit I am ANGRY about the way we have largely ignored the massive harm lockdowns and school closings have on kids. Remember: anyone under 30 is at almost ZERO risk here (there are always outliers; planes crash but flying is safe).

3/ The stress even on healthy families is incredible. And for children in troubled families, the cost is far higher; for those kids, schools may well be the only chance they have to be seen every day by an adult who is not high or abusive.

Alex Berenson @AlexBerenson · 10.04

4/ Of all the choices we've made, sacrificing the mental health of children at zero risk from this illness is the LEAST acceptable. But so many in the media are young and don't have children, or perhaps are married couples with one child (an equation that makes care easier).

Nobody says COVID-19 is not real, that it can't tax hospitals or kill people, esp. if they are over 75 or have comorbidities. But right now the best CURRENT projection is for 61,000 US deaths. That was the 2017 flu season. Why have we shut the country?

The Wisconsin Supreme Court has struck down the state's lockdown, pending a one-week stay:

Wisconsin Supreme Court strikes down Tony Evers' stay-at-home order that closed businesses, schools to limit spread of coronavirus order that closed businesses, schools to limit spread of coronavirus

MOLLY BECK AND PATRICK MARLEY

MADISON – The Wisconsin Supreme Court struck down Gov. Tony Evers' stay-at-home order that closed businesses, schools to limit spread of coronavirus

The state's highest court, which is controlled by conservatives, sided with Republican lawmakers who argued that Evers' March 24 order exceeded his authority as governor.

The 4-3 decision was split along party lines, with the court's conservatives – Chief Justice Patience Roggensack and Justices Rebecca Bradley, Daniel Kelly and Annette Ziegler

The court's right-wing majority, Republican lawmakers and business groups argued that Evers' order was unconstitutional because it was issued without legislative approval during a public health emergency.

CORRECTION: No stay. Order TAKES IMMEDIATE EFFECT.

Not sure society has ever had a bigger gap between parents (esp. those who get the real ~0 risk of #COVID19 for kids), who see the damage school closings and lost playdates do every day, and the childless, who appear happy to watch Netflix and eat takeout forever.

6/ Final point: the paper concludes the real bottleneck is in trained staff and "priority should focus not only on increasing [ventilators]... but on growing the number of trained professionals."

But I guess bashing the WH for not nationalizing ventilator production is more fun.

This is the @IMHE_UW model for #Covid_19, the new US standard. It was put out SIX days ago (post lockdown). It projects New York State will have 50,000 hospitalizations TODAY. Instead NYS has 12,000. Wrong by 4x in under a week. What on earth are we doing?

covid19.healthdata.org/projections

The charts below show projected hospital resource use based on COVID-19 deaths. The model assumes continued social distancing until the end of May 2020.

In locations without social distancing measures currently in place, we have assumed they will be in place within seven days of the last model update. If not, the number of deaths and burden on their hospital systems will likely be higher than the model predicts.

For answers to other frequently asked questions about the modeling, ...

National Vital Statistics System

COVID-19 Alert No. 2
March 24, 2020

New ICD code introduced for COVID-19 deaths
This email is to alert you that a newly-introduced ICD code has been implemented to accurately capture mortality data for Coronavirus Disease 2019 (COVID-19) on death certificates.

Please read carefully and forward this email to the state statistical staff in your office who are involved in the preparation of mortality data, as well as others who may receive questions when the data are released.

What is the new code?
The new ICD code for Coronavirus Disease 2019 (COVID-19) is U07.1, and below is how it will appear in formal tabular list format.

U07.1 COVID-19
Excludes: Coronavirus infection, unspecified site (B34.2)
Severe acute respiratory syndrome (SARS), unspecified (U04.9)

The WHO has provided a second code, U07.2, for clinical or epidemiological diagnosis of COVID-19 where a laboratory confirmation is inconclusive or not available. Because laboratory test results are not typically reported on death certificates in the U.S., NCHS is not planning to implement U07.2 for mortality statistics.

When will it be implemented?
Immediately.

Will COVID-19 be the underlying cause?
The underlying cause depends upon what and where conditions are reported on the death certificate. However, the rules for coding and selection of the underlying cause of death are expected to result in COVID-19 being the underlying cause more often than not.

What happens if certifiers report terms other than the suggested terms?
If a death certificate reports coronavirus without identifying a specific strain or explicitly specifying that it is not COVID-19, NCHS will ask the states to follow up to verify whether or not the coronavirus was COVID-19.

Alex Berenson
@AlexBerenson

2/ And, btw, other possibly relevant factors, like, oh, COPD, are considered secondary. The rules "are expected to result in COVID-19 being the underlying cause more often than not."

The @IHME_UW model vs reality for New York State, April 5. The model is less accurate than ever. 69K beds projected, 16.5K actually needed; 12,346 ICU beds projected, 4376 needed. Even better (tho not for the model), overall bed count rose less than 600 statewide - less than 4%.

3/ And while acknowledging the economic crisis, Vance more or less throws up his hands, saying that it would have happened anyway. But the difference between voluntary social distancing and what we have now is the distance between recession and depression. That's no exaggeration.

1/ #COVID—19 is devastating hospitals and employees nationally. But not for the reason you think. They are empty - prepared for a surge that has not come - and burning cash. An executive reports his group's stronger hospitals have "months" of cash; the weaker ones have "weeks."

about 15 other CFOs

- Seeing decline in volume about 40% and similar revenue cut – his low was about 50% cut in volume but only about 2-5% COVID
- Outpatient basically is a zero
- Only exception is hot spots which have a lot of volume but much lower revenue and higher cost because of PPE
- A reasonable way to think about it is down 40-60% at the peak
- No one expects to recapture everything they lost
- Staff
  - Not flexing yet
  - Post spike in likely have to make some adjustments
  - Could take 40% off of earnings and need to reduce staffing by 10% but not close to enough
- Longer term impact

Nobody says COVID-19 is not real, that it can't tax hospitals or kill people, esp. if they are over 75 or have comorbidities. But right now the best CURRENT projection is for 61,000 US deaths. That was the 2017 flu season. Why have we shut the country?

1/ I'm going to try to explain this once more for all the blue-checks insisting that they KNOW lockdowns work.

The models failed. In real time. Even in NY state, the April 1 iteration of [illegible] model estimated four times the hospitalizations last week as were taking place.

Alex Berenson
@AlexBerenson

Sledovat

2/ But it's crucial to understand WHY they failed.

There is a TIME LAG between infection, symptoms, hospitalization, ICU care, and death. 5 days on average from infection to symptoms, several more days to hospitalization, 2-3 more to ICU care. These are averages, but correct.

4/ By that point, >5,000 new patients every day would need hospitalization - and ultimately New York would need 140,000 hospital beds and 30,000-40,000 ventilators. (Remember those numbers?)

5/ BUT THE MODELS WERE WRONG. After March 25, new hospitalizations remained roughly flat in NY for the next 10 days. Now they have plunged. That's why the overflow in NYC is basically empty. (Outside NY, the trends are similar, and it doesn't matter when the lockdowns started.)

Alex Berenson @AlexBerenson · 10 Nis

6/ Now, there are several possible reasonable arguments around this, including that voluntary social distancing had some effect before the lockdown. And there's a much broader question as to what is happening right now in Spain and Italy – or Japan, or Sweden.

So @nytimes has a big story right now about a @fema model showing up to 300,000 deaths. The documents are "dated April 9," the story says. So they must account for everything we've learned this week - which would be bad news. But what the chart actually says: "Models from 3/31."

Stay-at-home orders, school closures and social distancing greatly reduce infections of the coronavirus, but lifting those restrictions after just 30 days will lead to a dramatic infection spike this summer and death tolls that would rival doing nothing, government projections indicate.

The projections obtained by The New York Times come from the departments of Homeland Security and Health and Human Services. The models use three scenarios. The first has policymakers doing nothing to mitigate the spread of the coronavirus. The

Because we know he's wrong... look at italy. Look at spain. The humans in those countries are not unique. it took china 2 full months of total totalitarian style lockdown to get down to levels where even their government that tried to cover this up is starting to reopen.

5/ Here's a link to the paper (thoughtfully provided by the Times) so you can read and judge it for yourself.

I don't understand the point of trying to drive panic with stories that are so misleading - and, frankly, so easily checked.

6/ Final point: the paper concludes the real bottleneck is in trained staff and "priority should focus not only on increasing [ventilators]... but on growing the number of trained professionals."

But I guess bashing the WH for not nationalizing ventilator production is more fun.

No way I'd even consider locking my kids inside. Our options have been limited but we have been getting outdoors every single day (even in the rain). If school doesn't resume in Ohio in the fall we will find a state where it is resuming and take our kids there

1/ Is this a serious question? Lockdowns have caused massive economic, educational, and societal harm. Of course the public health experts who recommended them - and the governors who agreed to them - have every reason to make #COVID19 look as dangerous as possible...

> Sam Stein @samstein
> What's the theory here among people who think folks are deliberately over counting COVID-related deaths? Do they think this is being done to make Trump look bad? To create a permission structure to lock down society? To force a vaccine on the public? I'm asking sincerely.

Alex Berenson
@AlexBerenson

2/ As I have written before, this isn't even a conspiracy theory. A conspiracy theory is "Bill Gates cooked up #sars-cov-2" or "The Italian flu vaccine did it."

Understanding this dynamic merely requires basic knowledge of (non-conspiratorial) real-world political/social forces.

If you have any evidence of shortages in either PCR or antibody testing, now would be a good time to share it. Here's LA, Ohio, NYC (first two from readers, third from me):

order. Shocking stuff.

Meanwhile, look at what happens if I try to schedule at test for this afternoon (it is 12:15pm right now).

There are 300+ testing slots available at this one location just in the next 3 hours!

At Hansen Dam Recreation Center there are 120+ test slots remaining today.

NVSS National Vital Statistics System

COVID-19 Alert No. 2
March 24, 2020

New ICD code introduced for COVID-19 deaths
This email is to alert you that a newly-introduced ICD code has been implemented to accurately capture mortality data for Coronavirus Disease 2019 (COVID-19) on death certificates.

Please read carefully and forward this email to the state statistical staff in your office who are involved in the preparation of mortality data, as well as others who may receive questions when the data are released.

What is the new code?
The new ICD code for Coronavirus Disease 2019 (COVID-19) is U07.1, and below is how it will appear in formal tabular list format.

U07.1 COVID-19
Excludes: Coronavirus infection, unspecified site (B34.2)
Severe acute respiratory syndrome [SARS], unspecified (U04.9)

The WHO has provided a second code, U07.2, for clinical or epidemiological diagnosis of COVID-19 where a laboratory confirmation is inconclusive or not available. Because laboratory test results are not typically reported on death certificates in the U.S., NCHS is not planning to implement U07.2 for mortality statistics.

When will it be implemented?
Immediately.

Will COVID-19 be the underlying cause?
The underlying cause depends upon what and where conditions are reported on the death certificate. However, the rules for coding and selection of the underlying cause of death are expected to result in COVID-19 being the underlying cause more often than not.

What happens if certifiers report terms other than the suggested terms?
If a death certificate reports coronavirus without identifying a specific strain or explicitly specifying that it is not COVID-19, NCHS will ask the states to follow up to verify whether or not the coronavirus was COVID-19.

2/ And, btw, other possibly relevant factors, like, oh, COPD, are considered secondary. The rules “are expected to result in COVID-19 being the underlying cause more often than not.”

1/ [illegible] appears to have updated its model: It has cut the number of hospital beds needed for [illegible] patients on the peak of April by 45% - from 262,000 to 141,000 and ICU beds by 26% - from almost 39,700 to 29,200. Yet deaths remain almost the same, around 80,000...

So @NYGovCuomo has reported ICU patients and discharges for weeks. Not today. Just new hospitalizations - which are now 2/5 what they were a week ago - and deaths (a lagging indicator, as he said). I wonder why. And, oh yeah, a promise NY won't go back to normal anytime soon.

3/ Only Ohio didn't actually issue a lockdown order until Monday, March 23. Yes, lockdowns are such magic that they can PREVENT (theoretical) peaks that occurred before they were issued...

during his daily news conference to update the spread of the COVID-19 coronavirus, stating that ODH Director Dr. Amy Acton has signed the order.

"There is really nothing in that order, that we have not already been talking about," said DeWine. "There's nothing in that order, that I have not been asking you to do for the last week or so."

The order goes into effect at 11:59 p.m. Monday and will go until at least April 6. Then it will be reevaluated, according to DeWine.

DeWine stated that the ODH website would have more information when it was available.

it's as if MSM is willfully ignorant of the difference between social distancing and complete lockdown; a supposed statewide "lock down" went into effect here in GA last Friday, after the heat just became too much for our governor, but almost nothing changed!

The 250-bed facility, for which setup began on March 30, was intended to help Washington state's health care system tend to non Covid-19 patients in the event of a hospital surge.

But just three days after announcing the facility was ready to receive patients, officials say they're returning the hospital to the federal government.

The action is aimed at helping another state with a more significant need for hospital capacity at this time, according to the Governor's Office. The facility did not see any patients during the time it was slated to operate in Seattle.

1/ Assuming (and this is a big assumption) that the lockdown governors understand the lack of evidence that masks are useful - especially outdoors - why would they insist on them? Three possible reasons come to mind, one semi-legitimate and the other two uglier...

2/ The semi-legitimate one: making everyone wear masks theoretically lessens the stigma for sick people to wear them, and thus makes compliance by the sick more likely.

The ugly one: masks give governors who want to end lockdowns an excuse - look, we figured out masks work.

3/ The really ugly one: masks are a form of social control, and the lockdown governors have learned to love social control; they are an easy way to shame anyone who does not agree that [illegible] is very, very dangerous, and very special rules are needed...

Alex Berenson @AlexBerenson · 3h

4/ As an added bonus, to the extent masks work at all, one reason may be that under normal circumstances they DO signal sick people, and thus encourage healthy people to remain at a distance; requiring them to be worn universally Switzerland's per capita death rate is very close to the US's. Also, its main measures were probably implemented too late to have had much of an effect on the spread. Peak deaths on Apr 4 suggests infection had likely already peaked there Mar 12 or so.

1/ As you sit home watching #COVID death counts spiral, please know the official @CDCgov guidance for coding COVID-related deaths is as follows: any death where the disease “caused or is assumed to have caused or contributed to death.” Confirmed lab tests are not required...

NVSS National Vital Statistics System

COVID-19 Alert No. 2
March 24, 2020

New ICD code introduced for COVID-19 deaths
This email is to alert you that a newly-introduced ICD code has been implemented to accurately capture mortality data for Coronavirus Disease 2019 (COVID-19) on death certificates.

Please read carefully and forward this email to the state statistical staff in your office who are involved in the preparation of mortality data, as well as others who may receive questions when the data are released.

What is the new code?
The new ICD code for Coronavirus Disease 2019 (COVID-19) is U07.1, and below is how it will appear in formal tabular list format.

U07.1 COVID-19
Excludes: Coronavirus infection, unspecified site (B34.2)
Severe acute respiratory syndrome [SARS], unspecified (U04.9)

The WHO has provided a second code, U07.2, for clinical or epidemiological diagnosis of COVID-19 where a laboratory confirmation is inconclusive or not available. Because laboratory test results are not typically reported on death certificates in the U.S., NCHS is not planning to implement U07.2 for mortality statistics.

When will it be implemented?
Immediately.

Will COVID-19 be the underlying cause?
The underlying cause depends upon what and where conditions are reported on the death certificate. However, the rules for coding and selection of the underlying cause of death are expected to result in COVID-19 being the underlying cause more often than not.

What happens if certifiers report terms other than the suggested terms?
If a death certificate reports coronavirus without identifying a specific strain or explicitly specifying that it is not COVID-19, NCHS will ask the states to follow up to verify whether or not the coronavirus was COVID-19.

Attention citizens! Your Dept. Of Pandemia wishes to report that, contrary to your foolish speculation, it is not drunk on power. Not even tipsy. All citizens must stop saying so immediately. Those who do not will be arrested for their own protection. Attention citizens!

The @IHME_UW model vs reality for New York State, April 5. The model is less accurate than ever. 69K beds projected, 16.5K actually needed; 12,346 ICU beds projected, 4376 needed. Even better (tho not for the model), overall bed count rose less than 600 statewide - less than 4%.

1/ ... appears to have updated its model: It has cut the number of hospital beds needed for ... patients on the peak of April by 45% - from 262,000 to 141,000 and ICU beds by 26% - from almost 39,700 to 29,200. Yet deaths remain almost the same, around 80,000...

2/ Unfortunately, though the model updated just now, its projections remain inaccurate for actual use TODAY: for example, it predicts New York state on April 5 will need 24,000 beds and 6,000 ICU beds, about 1/3 more than the actual usage today. Not sure what to say about this...

Expect it to NOT be over, because social capital has been bet.
- Doubling downs
- Claims of "success!" for the lockdowns
- Jeers at the "deniers" for almost killing everyone

The hysteria will remain, and probably find its way into the history books as truth.

I worked for Nielsen Media and they have "random" models that are very capable of doing this with a great deal of accuracy. They work in a multi billion dollar industry where absolute accurately counts.

3/ And while acknowledging the economic crisis, Vance more or less throws up his hands, saying that it would have happened anyway. But the difference between voluntary social distancing and what we have now is the distance between recession and depression. That's no exaggeration.

So @NYGovCuomo has reported ICU patients and discharges for weeks. Not today. Just new hospitalizations - which are now 2/5 what they were a week ago - and deaths (a lagging indicator, as he said). I wonder why. And, oh yeah, a promise NY won't go back to normal anytime soon.

1/ #COVID-19 is devastating hospitals and employees nationally. But not for the reason you think. They are empty - prepared for a surge that has not come - and burning cash. An executive reports his group's stronger hospitals have "months" of cash; the weaker ones have "weeks."

about 15 other CFOs

- Seeing decline in volume about 40% and similar revenue cut – his low was about 50% cut in volume but only about 2-5% COVID
- Outpatient basically is a zero
- Only exception is hot spots which have a lot of volume but much lower revenue and higher cost because of PPE
- A reasonable way to think about it is down 40-60% at the peak
- No one expects to recapture everything they lost
- Staff
  - Not flexing yet
  - Post spike in likely have to make some adjustments
  - Could take 40% off of earnings and need to reduce staffing by 10% but not close to enough
- Longer term impact

Nobody says COVID-19 is not real, that it can't tax hospitals or kill people, esp. if they are over 75 or have comorbidities. But right now the best CURRENT projection is for 61,000 US deaths. That was the 2017 flu season. Why have we shut the country?

3/ The models assumed (not unreasonably) that in places like New York, lockdowns had come TOO LATE. Between March 17 and March 25, hospitalizations in NY rose 7X. The models assumed that because of the time lag, the rise would go on UNTIL THE EFFECTS OF THE LOCKDOWN KICKED IN...

4/ By that point, >5,000 new patients every day would need hospitalization - and ultimately New York would need 140,000 hospital beds and 30,000-40,000 ventilators. (Remember those numbers?)

1/ So I don't want to go too far down the hole of arguing about #COVID death counts, but a reader pointed out a very odd change to the way Massachusetts is reporting deaths. Until April 6, the state reported deaths by day - that day, it reported 29. See below..

Long-Term Care Facilities Reporting At Least One Case of COVID-19	119
Hospitalization
Patient was hospitalized	1241
Patient was not hospitalized	3942
Under investigation	8654

NVSS National Vital Statistics System

COVID-19 Alert No. 2
March 24, 2020

New ICD code introduced for COVID-19 deaths
This email is to alert you that a newly-introduced ICD code has been implemented to accurately capture mortality data for Coronavirus Disease 2019 (COVID-19) on death certificates.

Please read carefully and forward this email to the state statistical staff in your office who are involved in the preparation of mortality data, as well as others who may receive questions when the data are released.

What is the new code?
The new ICD code for Coronavirus Disease 2019 (COVID-19) is U07.1, and below is how it will appear in formal tabular list format.

U07.1 COVID-19
Excludes: Coronavirus infection, unspecified site (B34.2)
Severe acute respiratory syndrome [SARS], unspecified (U04.9)

The WHO has provided a second code, U07.2, for clinical or epidemiological diagnosis of COVID-19 where a laboratory confirmation is inconclusive or not available. Because laboratory test results are not typically reported on death certificates in the U.S., NCHS is not planning to implement U07.2 for mortality statistics.

When will it be implemented?
Immediately.

Will COVID-19 be the underlying cause?
The underlying cause depends upon what and where conditions are reported on the death certificate. However, the rules for coding and selection of the underlying cause of death are expected to result in COVID-19 being the underlying cause more often than not.

What happens if certifiers report terms other than the suggested terms?
If a death certificate reports coronavirus without identifying a specific strain or explicitly specifying that it is not COVID-19, NCHS will ask the states to follow up to verify whether or not the coronavirus was COVID-19.

Alex Berenson
@AlexBerenson

Sledovat

2/ And, btw, other possibly relevant factors, like, oh, COPD, are considered secondary. The rules “are expected to result in COVID-19 being the underlying cause more often than not.”

The @IHME_UW model vs. reality for New York State, April 4: more of the same, 65,400 beds projected, 15,905 actually used (new hospitalizations fell notably day-over-day); 12,000 ICU beds projected, 4,100 used. Still basically fiction, but at least it's not getting MORE wrong.

The @IHME_UW model vs. reality for New York State, April 4: more of the same, 65,400 beds projected, 15,905 actually used (new hospitalizations fell notably day-over-day); 12,000 ICU beds projected, 4,100 used. Still basically fiction, but at least it's not getting MORE wrong.

The @IHME_UW model vs reality for New York State, April 5. The model is less accurate than ever. 69K beds projected, 16.5K actually needed; 12,346 ICU beds projected, 4376 needed. Even better (tho not for the model), overall bed count rose less than 600 statewide - less than 4%.

Cuomo when asked today about still needing 110k beds-"The number of beds doesn't really matter anymore. We have the beds. It's the ventilators, and then it's the staff." After going on about NY sharing v's from upstate to downstate, he admitted they haven't moved any yet.

1/ [redacted] appears to have updated its model: It has cut the number of hospital beds needed for [redacted] patients on the peak of April by 45% - from 262,000 to 141,000 and ICU beds by 26% - from almost 39,700 to 29,200. Yet deaths remain almost the same, around 80,000...

2/ Unfortunately, though the model updated just now, its projections remain inaccurate for actual use TODAY: for example, it predicts New York state on April 5 will need 24,000 beds and 6,000 ICU beds, about 1/3 more than the actual usage today. Not sure what to say about this...

2/ I would make a couple of points - it glides over just how concentrated the excess mortality risk appears to be in the very old and sick.Why isn't our focus on protecting THOSE folks rather than going immediately to lockdowns - which are hugely destructive by any measure?

3/ And while acknowledging the economic crisis, Vance more or less throws up his hands, saying that it would have happened anyway. But the difference between voluntary social distancing and what we have now is the distance between recession and depression. That's no exaggeration.

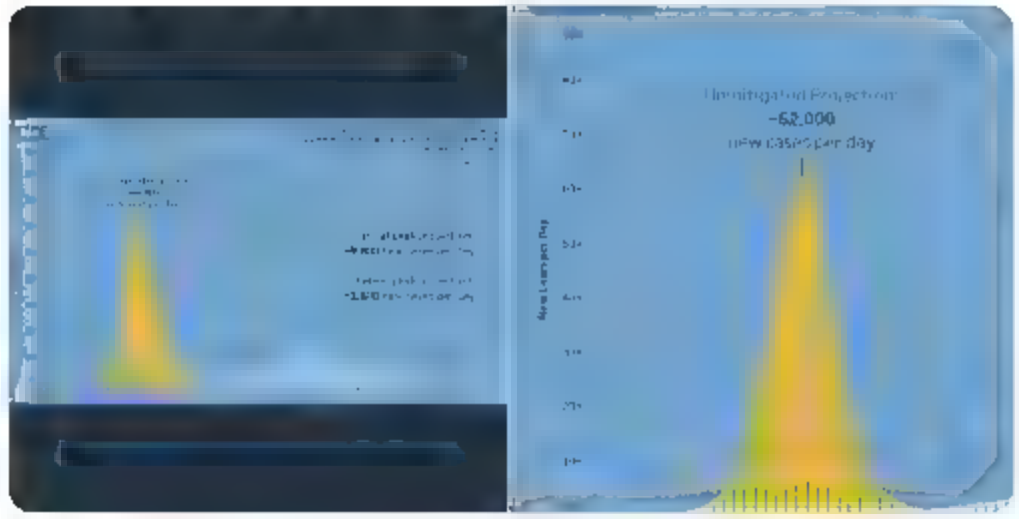
1/ #COVID-19 is devastating hospitals and employees nationally. But not for the reason you think. They are empty - prepared for a surge that has not come - and burning cash. An executive reports his group's stronger hospitals have "months" of cash; the weaker ones have "weeks."



about 15 other CFOs

- Seeing decline in volume about 40% and similar revenue cut – his low was about 50% cut in volume but only about 2-5% COVID
- Outpatient basically is a zero
- Only exception is hot spots which have a lot of volume but much lower revenue and higher cost because of PPE
- A reasonable way to think about it is down 40-60% at the peak
- No one expects to recapture everything they lost
- Staff
  - Not flexing yet
  - Post spike in likely have to make some adjustments
  - Could take 40% off of earnings and need to reduce staffing by 10% but not close to enough
- Longer term impact

during his daily news conference to update the spread of the COVID-19 coronavirus, stating that ODH Director Dr. Amy Acton has signed the order.

"There is really nothing in that order, that we have not already been talking about," said DeWine. "There's nothing in that order, that I have not been asking you to do for the last week or so."

The order goes into effect at 11:59 p.m. Monday and will go until at least April 6. Then it will be reevaluated, according to DeWine.

DeWine stated that the ODH website would have more information when it was available.

Time to start using more straightforward language and calling out people who don't tell the truth, like @pbump. The original model explicitly accounted for the effect of lockdowns. It was wrong in real-time, embarrassingly so; that's why it's been updated. (It's still wrong.)

Philip Bump @pbump
A notable shift downward in projected deaths from coronavirus is already being spun as "experts were wrong!!" Instead of "hey, the thing experts said would drive down deaths might be driving down deaths."

Nobody says COVID-19 is not real, that it can't tax hospitals or kill people, esp. if they are over 75 or have comorbidities. But right now the best CURRENT projection is for 61,000 US deaths. That was the 2017 flu season. Why have we shut the country?

field hospital deployed to CenturyLink Field Event Center to the U.S. Department of Defense.

The 250-bed facility, for which setup began on March 30, was intended to help Washington state's health care system tend to non Covid-19 patients in the event of a hospital surge.

But just three days after announcing the facility was ready to receive patients, officials say they're returning the hospital to the federal government.

The action is aimed at helping another state with a more significant need for hospital capacity at this time, according to the Governor's Office. The facility did not see any patients during the time it was slated to operate in Seattle.

1/ I'm going to try to explain this once more for all the blue-checks insisting that they KNOW lockdowns work.

The models failed. In real time. Even in NY state, the April 1 iteration of [illegible] model estimated four times the hospitalizations last week as were taking place.

Alex Berenson
@AlexBerenson

2/ But it's crucial to understand WHY they failed.

There is a TIME LAG between infection, symptoms, hospitalization, ICU care, and death. 5 days on average from infection to symptoms, several more days to hospitalization, 2-3 more to ICU care. These are averages, but correct.

5/ BUT THE MODELS WERE WRONG. After March 25, new hospitalizations remained roughly flat in NY for the next 10 days. Now they have plunged. That's why the overflow in NYC is basically empty. (Outside NY, the trends are similar, and it doesn't matter when the lockdowns started.)

6/ Now, there are several possible reasonable arguments around this, including that voluntary social distancing had some effect before the lockdown. And there's a much broader question as to what is happening right now in Spain and Italy – or Japan, or Sweden.

So @nytimes has a big story right now about a @fema model showing up to 300,000 deaths. The documents are "dated April 9," the story says. So they must account for everything we've learned this week - which would be bad news. But what the chart actually says: "Models from 3/31."

spike in infections if shelter in place orders are lifted at 30 days.

Stay-at-home orders, school closures and social distancing greatly reduce infections of the coronavirus, but lifting those restrictions after just 30 days will lead to a dramatic infection spike this summer and death tolls that would rival doing nothing, government projections indicate.

The projections obtained by The New York Times come from the departments of Homeland Security and Health and Human Services. The models use three scenarios. The first has policymakers doing nothing to mitigate the spread of the coronavirus. The

You may understand why this matters - but if not - the [redacted] projections have been changed THREE times since March 31 (resulting in sharp cuts in hospitalization/ICU projections). If this were actually made yesterday, it would be frightening. Instead it's just out of date.

1/ "There are at most 200K ventilators in the US. One million are expected to be needed." This horrifying news comes from my old employer [illegible]; it's sourced to the Society of Critical Care Medicine.

Only the SCCM didn't say that. At all. Let's see what it did say...

6/ Final point: the paper concludes the real bottleneck is in trained staff and "priority should focus not only on increasing [ventilators]... but on growing the number of trained professionals."

COVID-19 Alert No. 2
March 24, 2020

New ICD code introduced for COVID-19 deaths
This email is to alert you that a newly-introduced ICD code has been implemented to accurately capture mortality data for Coronavirus Disease 2019 (COVID-19) on death certificates.

Please read carefully and forward this email to the state statistical staff in your office who are involved in the preparation of mortality data, as well as others who may receive questions when the data are released.

What is the new code?
The new ICD code for Coronavirus Disease 2019 (COVID-19) is U07.1, and below is how it will appear in formal tabular list format.

U07.1 COVID-19
Excludes: Coronavirus infection, unspecified site (B34.2)
Severe acute respiratory syndrome [SARS], unspecified (U04.9)

The WHO has provided a second code, U07.2, for clinical or epidemiological diagnosis of COVID-19 where a laboratory confirmation is inconclusive or not available. Because laboratory test results are not typically reported on death certificates in the U.S., NCHS is not planning to implement U07.2 for mortality statistics.

When will it be implemented?
Immediately.

Will COVID-19 be the underlying cause?
The underlying cause depends upon what and where conditions are reported on the death certificate. However, the rules for coding and selection of the underlying cause of death are expected to result in COVID-19 being the underlying cause more often than not.

What happens if certifiers report terms other than the suggested terms?
If a death certificate reports coronavirus without identifying a specific strain or explicitly specifying that it is not COVID-19, NCHS will ask the states to follow up to verify whether or not the coronavirus was COVID-19.

The @IHME_UW model vs. reality for New York State, April 4: more of the same, 65,400 beds projected, 15,905 actually used (new hospitalizations fell notably day-over-day); 12,000 ICU beds projected, 4,100 used. Still basically fiction, but at least it's not getting MORE wrong.

The @[redacted] model vs reality for New York State, April 5. The model is less accurate than ever. 69K beds projected, 16.5K actually needed; 12,346 ICU beds projected, 4376 needed. Even better (tho not for the model), overall bed count rose less than 600 statewide - less than 4%.

Expect it to NOT be over, because social capital has been bet.

The hysteria will remain, and probably find its way into the history books as truth.

So @nytimes has a big story right now about a @fema model showing up to 300,000 deaths. The documents are "dated April 9," the story says. So they must account for everything we've learned this week - which would be bad news. But what the chart actually says: "Models from 3/31."

spike in infections if shelter in place orders are lifted at 30 days.

Stay-at-home orders, school closures and social distancing greatly reduce infections of the coronavirus, but lifting those restrictions after just 30 days will lead to a dramatic infection spike this summer and death tolls that would rival doing nothing, government projections indicate.

The projections obtained by The New York Times come from the departments of Homeland Security and Health and Human Services. The models use three scenarios. The first has policymakers doing nothing to mitigate the spread of the coronavirus. The

You may understand why this matters - but if not - the [redacted] projections have been changed THREE times since March 31 (resulting in sharp cuts in hospitalization/ICU projections). If this were actually made yesterday, it would be frightening. Instead it's just out of date.

1/ So I don't want to go too far down the hole of arguing about #COVID death counts, but a reader pointed out a very odd change to the way Massachusetts is reporting deaths. Until April 6, the state reported deaths by day - that day, it reported 29. See below..

Long-Term Care Facilities Reporting At Least One Case of COVID-19	119
Hospitalization
Patient was hospitalized	1241
Patient was not hospitalized	3942
Under investigation	8654

These data are cumulative and current as of April 6, 2020 at 12:30PM
*Reflects improved facility definitions and data collection. These include positive cases at nursing homes, rest homes, and skilled nursing facilities

6/ Final point: the paper concludes the real bottleneck is in trained staff and "priority should focus not only on increasing [ventilators]... but on growing the number of trained professionals."

But I guess bashing the WH for not nationalizing ventilator production is more fun.

The @IHME_UW model vs. reality for New York State, April 4: more of the same, 65,400 beds projected, 15,905 actually used (new hospitalizations fell notably day-over-day); 12,000 ICU beds projected, 4,100 used. Still basically fiction, but at least it's not getting MORE wrong.

The @IHME_UW model vs reality for New York State, April 5. The model is less accurate than ever. 69K beds projected, 16.5K actually needed; 12,346 ICU beds projected, 4376 needed. Even better (tho not for the model), overall bed count rose less than 600 statewide - less than 4%.

Cuomo when asked today about still needing 110k beds-"The number of beds doesn't really matter anymore. We have the beds. It's the ventilators, and then it's the staff." After going on about NY sharing v's from upstate to downstate, he admitted they haven't moved any yet.

Here is the newly updated mIHME_UW model with predictions for NY state today (which doesn't need to be predicted, as it's already happened). And here's the actual data from today. As you can see, the NEW model can't even get today right.

The hysteria will remain, and probably find its way into the history books as truth.

1/ Now California is sending back extra ventilators too... As I mentioned a couple weeks ago, any new ventilators we build at this point will likely be very expensive furniture. We don't have the docs and nurses to run them and we don't need them anyway:

2/ One would think the fact all three West Coast states have decided they don't need more of the most crucial piece of equipment in treating serious #CV cases would lead reporters to ask hard questions about the projected course of the epidemic - and lockdowns. One would think.

The experts are boxed in by the lockdown strategy. No incentive to be found out. Nobody wants to be blamed for crashing an economy for no valid scientific reason.

I saw that in Cuomo yesterday. Plus, Trump has his fingers all over this mess. He failed to follow his gut and instead listened to these doctors who have not treated a patient in decades. What a debacle they caused.

I worked for Nielsen Media and they have "random" models that are very capable of doing this with a great deal of accuracy. They work in a multi billion dollar industry where absolute accurately counts.

So @NYGovCuomo has reported ICU patients and discharges for weeks. Not today. Just new hospitalizations - which are now 2/5 what they were a week ago - and deaths (a lagging indicator, as he said). I wonder why. And, oh yeah, a promise NY won't go back to normal anytime soon.

1/ #COVID-19 is devastating hospitals and employees nationally. But not for the reason you think. They are empty - prepared for a surge that has not come - and burning cash. An executive reports his group's stronger hospitals have "months" of cash; the weaker ones have "weeks."

about 15 other CFOs

- Seeing decline in volume about 40% and similar revenue cut – his low was about 50% cut in volume but only about 2-5% COVID
- Outpatient basically is a zero
- Only exception is hot spots which have a lot of volume but much lower revenue and higher cost because of PPE
- A reasonable way to think about it is down 40-60% at the peak
- No one expects to recapture everything they lost
- Staff
  - Not flexing yet
  - Post spike in likely have to make some adjustments
  - Could take 40% off of earnings and need to reduce staffing by 10% but not close to enough
- Longer term impact

1/ #COVID-19 is devastating hospitals and employees nationally. But not for the reason you think. They are empty - prepared for a surge that has not come - and burning cash. An executive reports his group's stronger hospitals have "months" of cash; the weaker ones have "weeks."

about 15 other CFOs

- Seeing decline in volume about 40% and similar revenue cut – his low was about 50% cut in volume but only about 2-5% COVID
- Outpatient basically is a zero
- Only exception is hot spots which have a lot of volume but much lower revenue and higher cost because of PPE
- A reasonable way to think about it is down 40-60% at the peak
- No one expects to recapture everything they lost
- Staff
  - Not flexing yet
  - Post spike in likely have to make some adjustments
  - Could take 40% off of earnings and need to reduce staffing by 10% but not close to enough
- Longer term impact

3/ Only Ohio didn't actually issue a lockdown order until Monday, March 23. Yes, lockdowns are such magic that they can PREVENT (theoretical) peaks that occurred before they were issued...

during his daily news conference to update the spread of the COVID-19 coronavirus, stating that ODH Director Dr. Amy Acton has signed the order.

"There is really nothing in that order, that we have not already been talking about," said DeWine. "There's nothing in that order, that I have not been asking you to do for the last week or so."

The order goes into effect at 11:59 p.m. Monday and will go until at least April 6. Then it will be reevaluated, according to DeWine.

DeWine stated that the ODH website would have more information when it was available.

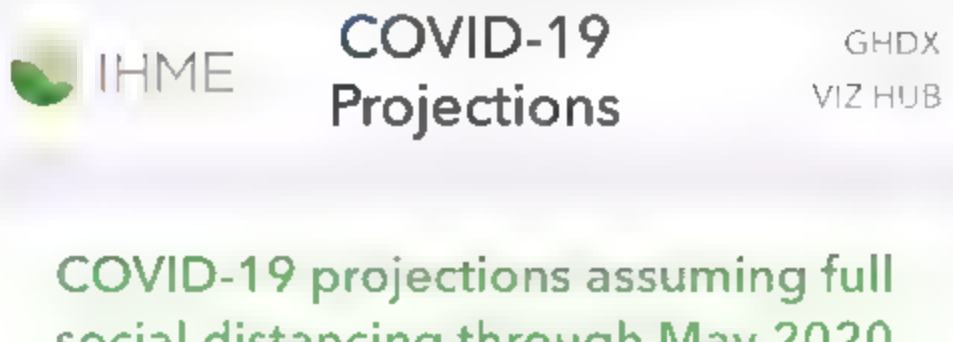
Time to start using more straightforward language and calling out people who don't tell the truth, like @pbump. The original model explicitly accounted for the effect of lockdowns. It was wrong in real-time, embarrassingly so; that's why it's been updated. (It's still wrong.)



Philip Bump ✓ @pbump
A notable shift downward in projected deaths from coronavirus is already being spun as "experts were wrong!!" Instead of "hey, the thing experts said would drive down deaths might be driving down deaths."

Nobody says COVID-19 is not real, that it can't tax hospitals or kill people, esp. if they are over 75 or have comorbidities. But right now the best CURRENT projection is for 61,000 US deaths. That was the 2017 flu season. Why have we shut the country?

Washington State shuts down its COVID field hospital. Total patient count: Zero. The move is ""aimed at helping another state with a more significant need..." Good luck with that.

Army field hospital for Covid-19 surge leaves Seattle after 9

field hospital deployed to CenturyLink Field Event Center to the U.S. Department of Defense.

The 250-bed facility, for which setup began on March 30, was intended to help Washington state's health care system tend to non Covid-19 patients in the event of a hospital surge.

But just three days after announcing the facility was ready to receive patients, officials say they're returning the hospital to the federal government.

The action is aimed at helping another state with a more significant need for hospital capacity at this time, according to the Governor's Office. The facility did not see any patients during the time it was slated to operate in Seattle.

1/ So I don't want to go too far down the hole of arguing about #COVID death counts, but a reader pointed out a very odd change to the way Massachusetts is reporting deaths. Until April 6, the state reported deaths by day - that day, it reported 29. See below..

Long-Term Care Facilities Reporting At Least One Case of COVID-19	119
Hospitalization
Patient was hospitalized	1241
Patient was not hospitalized	3942
Under investigation	8654

These data are cumulative and current as of April 6, 2020 at 12:30PM
*Reflects improved facility definitions and data collection. These include positive cases at nursing homes, rest homes, and skilled nursing facilities.

3/ And Italian and UK and US (the UK and US are a bit older, but you get the idea). The greatest risk BY FAR of dying from #SARS_COV_2 is advanced age - this is why developing countries seem to have avoided any crisis. Remind me again why we've blown up the world?

Glad to see this thread on the absurdity of the test-and-trace schemes that US public health experts are proposing got the attention it deserves. Keith is smart, scrupulous, honest, and thoughtful - a rare combination in academia or anywhere else.

5/ Here's a link to the paper (thoughtfully provided by the Times) so you can read and judge it for yourself.

[redacted]

I don't understand the point of trying to drive panic with stories that are so misleading - and, frankly, so easily checked.

6/ Final point: the paper concludes the real bottleneck is in trained staff and "priority should focus not only on increasing [ventilators]... but on growing the number of trained professionals."

But I guess bashing the WH for not nationalizing ventilator production is more fun.

5/ One last point here: Ferguson gives the lockdown credit, which is interesting - the UK only began ita lockdown 2 days ago, and the theory is that lockdowns take 2 weeks or more to work.

Alex Berenson
@AlexBerenson

6/ Not surprisingly, this testimony has received no attention in the US - I found it only in UK papers. Team Apocalypse is not interested.

COVID-19 Alert No. 2
March 24, 2020

New ICD code introduced for COVID-19 deaths
This email is to alert you that a newly-introduced ICD code has been implemented to accurately capture mortality data for Coronavirus Disease 2019 (COVID-19) on death certificates.

Please read carefully and forward this email to the state statistical staff in your office who are involved in the preparation of mortality data, as well as others who may receive questions when the data are released.

What is the new code?
The new ICD code for Coronavirus Disease 2019 (COVID-19) is U07.1, and below is how it will appear in formal tabular list format.

U07.1 COVID-19
Excludes: Coronavirus infection, unspecified site (B34.2)
Severe acute respiratory syndrome [SARS], unspecified (U04.9)

The WHO has provided a second code, U07.2, for clinical or epidemiological diagnosis of COVID-19 where a laboratory confirmation is inconclusive or not available. Because laboratory test results are not typically reported on death certificates in the U.S., NCHS is not planning to implement U07.2 for mortality statistics.

When will it be implemented?
Immediately.

Will COVID-19 be the underlying cause?
The underlying cause depends upon what and where conditions are reported on the death certificate. However, the rules for coding and selection of the underlying cause of death are expected to result in COVID-19 being the underlying cause more often than not.

What happens if certifiers report terms other than the suggested terms?
If a death certificate reports coronavirus without identifying a specific strain or explicitly specifying that it is not COVID-19, NCHS will ask the states to follow up to verify whether or not the coronavirus was COVID-19.

The @IHME_UW model vs. reality for New York State, April 4: more of the same, 65,400 beds projected, 15,905 actually used (new hospitalizations fell notably day-over-day); 12,000 ICU beds projected, 4,100 used. Still basically fiction, but at least it's not getting MORE wrong.

The @IHME_UW model vs reality for New York State, April 5. The model is less accurate than ever. 69K beds projected, 16.5K actually needed; 12,346 ICU beds projected, 4376 needed. Even better (tho not for the model), overall bed count rose less than 4%.

Is it too late to cancel the ventilator orders? As furniture goes they're pretty expensive. And not that attractive.

Cuomo on plan to take ventilators: We're not in the position that we were in that feared losing ventilators and other equipment to Gov. Andrew Cuomo's plan to take unused supplies may not have as much to worry about.

"We're not in the position that we were in," Cuomo said today during a press briefing in Albany.

He had said Friday he planned to sign an executive ordering requiring hospitals to give up unused ventilators and other medical gear. He said he would to deploy the National Guard to collect the supplies and redistribute them to hospitals stressed by the coronavirus pandemic in the New York City area.

2/ I would make a couple of points - it glides over just how concentrated the excess mortality risk appears to be in the very old and sick.Why isn't our focus on protecting THOSE folks rather than going immediately to lockdowns - which are hugely destructive by any measure?

[redacted] AM - [redacted]

3/ And while acknowledging the economic crisis, Vance more or less throws up his hands, saying that it would have happened anyway. But the difference between voluntary social distancing and what we have now is the distance between recession and depression. That's no exaggeration.

So @NYGovCuomo has reported ICU patients and discharges for weeks. Not today. Just new hospitalizations - which are now 2/5 what they were a week ago - and deaths (a lagging indicator, as he said). I wonder why. And, oh yeah, a promise NY won't go back to normal anytime soon.

1/ #COVID-19 is devastating hospitals and employees nationally. But not for the reason you think. They are empty - prepared for a surge that has not come - and burning cash. An executive reports his group's stronger hospitals have "months" of cash; the weaker ones have "weeks."

about 15 other CFOs

- Seeing decline in volume about 40% and similar revenue cut – his low was about 50% cut in volume but only about 2-5% COVID
- Outpatient basically is a zero
- Only exception is hot spots which have a lot of volume but much lower revenue and higher cost because of PPE
- A reasonable way to think about it is down 40-60% at the peak
- No one expects to recapture everything they lost
- Staff
  - Not flexing yet
  - Post spike in likely have to make some adjustments
  - Could take 40% off of earnings and need to reduce staffing by 10% but not close to enough
- Longer term impact

5/ BUT THE MODELS WERE WRONG. After March 25, new hospitalizations remained roughly flat in NY for the next 10 days. Now they have plunged. That's why the overflow in NYC is basically empty. (Outside NY, the trends are similar, and it doesn't matter when the lockdowns started.)

6/ Now, there are several possible reasonable arguments around this, including that voluntary social distancing had some effect before the lockdown. And there's a much broader question as to what is happening right now in Spain and Italy – or Japan, or Sweden.

Did the models for hospitalizations and deaths account for millions of hydroxychloroquine pills sent to NY and taken and work?

1/ So I don't want to go too far down the hole of arguing about #COVID death counts, but a reader pointed out a very odd change to the way Massachusetts is reporting deaths. Until April 6, the state reported deaths by day - that day, it reported 29. See below..

Long-Term Care Facilities Reporting At Least One Case of COVID-19	119
Hospitalization
Patient was hospitalized	1241
Patient was not hospitalized	3942
Under investigation	8654

These data are cumulative and current as of April 6, 2020 at 12:30PM

The charts below show projected hospital resource use based on COVID-19 deaths. The model assumes continued social distancing until the end of May 2020.

In locations without social distancing measures currently in place, we have assumed they will be in place within seven days of the last model update. If not, the number of deaths and burden on their hospital systems will likely be higher than the model predicts.

1/ As you sit home watching #COVID death counts spiral, please know the official @CDCgov guidance for coding COVID-related deaths is as follows: any death where the disease "caused or is assumed to have caused or contributed to death." Confirmed lab tests are not required...

COVID-19 Alert No. 2
March 24, 2020

New ICD code introduced for COVID-19 deaths
This email is to alert you that a newly-introduced ICD code has been implemented to accurately capture mortality data for Coronavirus Disease 2019 (COVID-19) on death certificates.

Please read carefully and forward this email to the state statistical staff in your office who are involved in the preparation of mortality data, as well as others who may receive questions when the data are released.

What is the new code?
The new ICD code for Coronavirus Disease 2019 (COVID-19) is U07.1, and below is how it will appear in formal tabular list format.

U07.1 COVID-19
Excludes: Coronavirus infection, unspecified site (B34.2)
Severe acute respiratory syndrome [SARS], unspecified (U04.9)

The WHO has provided a second code, U07.2, for clinical or epidemiological diagnosis of COVID-19 where a laboratory confirmation is inconclusive or not available. Because laboratory test results are not typically reported on death certificates in the U.S., NCHS is not planning to implement U07.2 for mortality statistics.

When will it be implemented?
Immediately.

Will COVID-19 be the underlying cause?
The underlying cause depends upon what and where conditions are reported on the death certificate. However, the rules for coding and selection of the underlying cause of death are expected to result in COVID-19 being the underlying cause more often than not.

What happens if certifiers report terms other than the suggested terms?
If a death certificate reports coronavirus without identifying a specific strain or explicitly specifying that it is not COVID-19, NCHS will ask the states to follow up to verify whether or not the coronavirus was COVID-19.

This is the @IMHE_UW model for #Covid_19, the new US standard. It was put out SIX days ago (post lockdown). It projects New York State will have 50,000 hospitalizations TODAY. Instead NYS has 12,000. Wrong by 4x in under a week. What on earth are we doing? covid19.healthdata.org/projections

So they want to release inmates from jail and jail citizens who go out but, are still 6+ feet away from others. This is great optics.

The @IHME_UW model vs. reality for New York State, April 4: more of the same, 65,400 beds projected, 15,905 actually used (new hospitalizations fell notably day-over-day); 12,000 ICU beds projected, 4,100 used. Still basically fiction, but at least it's not getting MORE wrong.

The @IHME_UW model vs reality for New York State, April 5. The model is less accurate than ever. 69K beds projected, 16.5K actually needed; 12,346 ICU beds projected, 4376 needed. Even better (tho not for the model), overall bed count rose less than 600 statewide - less than 4%.

Cuomo when asked today about still needing 110k beds-"The number of beds doesn't really matter anymore. We have the beds. It's the ventilators, and then it's the staff." After going on about NY sharing v's from upstate to downstate, he admitted they haven't moved any yet.

1/ [illegible] appears to have updated its model: It has cut the number of hospital beds needed for [illegible] patients on the peak of April by 45% - from 262,000 to 141,000 and ICU beds by 26% - from almost 39,700 to 29,200. Yet deaths remain almost the same, around 80,000...

59 172 423

Alex Berenson
@AlexBerenson

2/ Unfortunately, though the model updated just now, its projections remain inaccurate for actual use TODAY: for example, it predicts New York state on April 5 will need 24,000 beds and 6,000 ICU beds, about 1/3 more than the actual usage today. Not sure what to say about this...

1/ Now California is sending back extra ventilators too... As I mentioned a couple weeks ago, any new ventilators we build at this point will likely be very expensive furniture. We don't have the docs and nurses to run them and we don't need them anyway:

2/ One would think the fact all three West Coast states have decided they don't need more of the most crucial piece of equipment in treating serious #CV cases would lead reporters to ask hard questions about the projected course of the epidemic - and lockdowns. One would think.

1/ #COVID-19 is devastating hospitals and employees nationally. But not for the reason you think. They are empty - prepared for a surge that has not come - and burning cash. An executive reports his group's stronger hospitals have "months" of cash; the weaker ones have "weeks."

about 15 other CFOs

- Seeing decline in volume about 40% and similar revenue cut – his low was about 50% cut in volume but only about 2-5% COVID
- Outpatient basically is a zero
- Only exception is hot spots which have a lot of volume but much lower revenue and higher cost because of PPE
- A reasonable way to think about it is down 40-60% at the peak
- No one expects to recapture everything they lost
- Staff
  - Not flexing yet
  - Post spike in likely have to make some adjustments
  - Could take 40% off of earnings and need to reduce staffing by 10% but not close to enough
- Longer term impact

3/ Only Ohio didn't actually issue a lockdown order until Monday, March 23. Yes, lockdowns are such magic that they can PREVENT (theoretical) peaks that occurred before they were issued...

during his daily news conference to update the spread of the COVID-19 coronavirus, stating that ODH Director Dr. Amy Acton has signed the order.

"There is really nothing in that order, that we have not already been talking about," said DeWine. "There's nothing in that order, that I have not been asking you to do for the last week or so."

The order goes into effect at 11:59 p.m. Monday and will go until at least April 6. Then it will be reevaluated, according to DeWine.

DeWine stated that the ODH website would have more information when it was available.

As an Ohioian, I am so disgusted with how this whole thing has been handled. They bought Acton's "act" hook-line-and-sinker. When will DeWine realize that the stupid exec orders are no longer necessary & get Ohio back to work? Probably never, he is drunk on the praise over this!

"We're not in the position that we were in," Cuomo said today during a press briefing in Albany.

He had said Friday he planned to sign an executive ordering requiring hospitals to give up unused ventilators and other medical gear. He said he would to deploy the National Guard to collect the supplies and redistribute them to hospitals stressed by the coronavirus pandemic in the New York City area.

Time to start using more straightforward language and calling out people who don't tell the truth, like @pbump. The original model explicitly accounted for the effect of lockdowns. It was wrong in real-time, embarrassingly so; that's why it's been updated. (It's still wrong.)

Philip Bump @pbump
A notable shift downward in projected deaths from coronavirus is already being spun as "experts were wrong!!" Instead of "hey, the thing experts said would drive down deaths might be driving down deaths."

1/ I'm going to try to explain this once more for all the blue-checks insisting that they KNOW lockdowns work.

The models failed. In real time. Even in NY state, the April 1 iteration of [illegible] model estimated four times the hospitalizations last week as were taking place.

Alex Berenson
@AlexBerenson

2/ But it's crucial to understand WHY they failed.

There is a TIME LAG between infection, symptoms, hospitalization, ICU care, and death. 5 days on average from infection to symptoms, several more days to hospitalization, 2-3 more to ICU care. These are averages, but correct.

7/ But before we can have that debate, everyone needs to underestimate that the models didn't fail last week because they UNDERESTIMATED the effect of the lockdowns. They failed because they OVERESTIMATED the effect. Anyone who says otherwise just doesn't understand the lag.

Did the models for hospitalizations and deaths account for millions of hydroxychloroquine pills sent to NY and taken and work?

So ... has a big story right now about a ... model showing up to 300,000 deaths. The documents are "dated April 9," the story says. So they must account for everything we've learned this week - which would be bad news. But what the chart actually says: "Models from 3/31."

spike in infections if shelter in place orders are lifted at 30 days.

Stay-at-home orders, school closures and social distancing greatly reduce infections of the coronavirus, but lifting those restrictions after just 30 days will lead to a dramatic infection spike this summer and death tolls that would rival doing nothing, government projections indicate.

The projections obtained by The New York Times come from the departments of Homeland Security and Health and Human Services. The models use three scenarios. The first has policymakers doing nothing to mitigate the spread of the coronavirus. The

You may understand why this matters - but if not - the @ HME UW projections have been changed THREE times since March 31 (resulting in sharp cuts in hospitalization/ICU projections). If this were actually made yesterday, it would be frightening. Instead it's just out of date.

6/ Final point: the paper concludes the real bottleneck is in trained staff and "priority should focus not only on increasing [ventilators]... but on growing the number of trained professionals."

But I guess bashing the WH for not nationalizing ventilator production is more fun.

This is the @IMHE_UW model for #Covid_19, the new US standard. It was put out SIX days ago (post lockdown). It projects New York State will have 50,000 hospitalizations TODAY. Instead NYS has 12,000. Wrong by 4x in under a week. What on earth are we doing? covid19.healthdata.org/projections

3/ And while acknowledging the economic crisis, Vance more or less throws up his hands, saying that it would have happened anyway. But the difference between voluntary social distancing and what we have now is the distance between recession and depression. That's no exaggeration.

3/ And while acknowledging the economic crisis, Vance more or less throws up his hands, saying that it would have happened anyway. But the difference between voluntary social distancing and what we have now is the distance between recession and depression. That's no exaggeration.

1/ #COVID-19 is devastating hospitals and employees nationally. But not for the reason you think. They are empty - prepared for a surge that has not come - and burning cash. An executive reports his group's stronger hospitals have "months" of cash; the weaker ones have "weeks."

about 15 other CFOs

- Seeing decline in volume about 40% and similar revenue cut – his low was about 50% cut in volume but only about 2-5% COVID
- Outpatient basically is a zero
- Only exception is hot spots which have a lot of volume but much lower revenue and higher cost because of PPE
- A reasonable way to think about it is down 40-60% at the peak
- No one expects to recapture everything they lost
- Staff
  - Not flexing yet
  - Post spike in likely have to make some adjustments
  - Could take 40% off of earnings and need to reduce staffing by 10% but not close to enough
- Longer term impact

it's as if MSM is willfully ignorant of the difference between social distancing and complete lockdown; a supposed statewide "lock down" went into effect here in GA last Friday, after the heat just became too much for our governor, but almost nothing changed!

The 250-bed facility, for which setup began on March 30, was intended to help Washington state's health care system tend to non Covid-19 patients in the event of a hospital surge.

But just three days after announcing the facility was ready to receive patients, officials say they're returning the hospital to the federal government.

The action is aimed at helping another state with a more significant need for hospital capacity at this time, according to the Governor's Office. The facility did not see any patients during the time it was slated to operate in Seattle.

1/ I try to analyze dispassionately. But I will admit I am ANGRY about the way we have largely ignored the massive harm lockdowns and school closings have on kids. Remember: anyone under 30 is at almost ZERO risk here (there are always outliers; planes crash but flying is safe).

2/ Children, more than anyone else, suffer immediately from the lockdowns. They're denied school. They're denied normal socializing with their friends. In many places they have even - bizarrely - been denied the chance to play outside.

3/ The stress even on healthy families is incredible. And for children in troubled families, the cost is far higher; for those kids, schools may well be the only chance they have to be seen every day by an adult who is not high or abusive.

Alex Berenson @AlexBerenson · 10. tra

4/ Of all the choices we've made, sacrificing the mental health of children at zero risk from this illness is the LEAST acceptable. But so many in the media are young and don't have children, or perhaps are married couples with one child (an equation that makes care easier).

1/ I'm going to try to explain this once more for all the blue-checks insisting that they KNOW lockdowns work.

The models failed. In real time. Even in NY state, the April 1 iteration of [redacted] model estimated four times the hospitalizations last week as were taking place.

Alex Berenson
@AlexBerenson

2/ But it's crucial to understand WHY they failed.

There is a TIME LAG between infection, symptoms, hospitalization, ICU care, and death. 5 days on average from infection to symptoms, several more days to hospitalization, 2-3 more to ICU care. These are averages, but correct.

Stay-at-home orders, school closures and social distancing greatly reduce infections of the coronavirus, but lifting those restrictions after just 30 days will lead to a dramatic infection spike this summer and death tolls that would rival doing nothing, government projections indicate.

The projections obtained by The New York Times come from the departments of Homeland Security and Health and Human Services. The models use three scenarios. The first has policymakers doing nothing to mitigate the spread of the coronavirus. The

1/ So I don't want to go too far down the hole of arguing about #COVID death counts, but a reader pointed out a very odd change to the way Massachusetts is reporting deaths. Until April 6, the state reported deaths by day - that day, it reported 29. See below..

Long-Term Care Facilities Reporting At Least One Case of COVID-19	119
Hospitalization
Patient was hospitalized	1241
Patient was not hospitalized	3942
Under Investigation	8654

These data are cumulative and current as of April 6, 2020 at 12:30PM

3/ And Italian and UK and US (the UK and US are a bit older, but you get the idea). The greatest risk BY FAR of dying from #SARS_COV_2 is advanced age - this is why developing countries seem to have avoided any crisis. Remind me again why we've blown up the world?

Masks! Science! Science about masks! Or does this advice not count because it was leap day?

(There are serious points to be made here about relative risk and mask-wearing by trained healthcare workers versus slippy civilians, but those are for another time.)

6/ Final point: the paper concludes the real bottleneck is in trained staff and "priority should focus not only on increasing [ventilators]... but on growing the number of trained professionals."

But I guess bashing the WH for not nationalizing ventilator production is more fun.

1/ As you sit home watching #COVID death counts spiral, please know the official @CDCgov guidance for coding COVID-related deaths is as follows: any death where the disease "caused or is assumed to have caused or contributed to death." Confirmed lab tests are not required...

cdc.gov

NVSS National Vital Statistics System

COVID-19 Alert No. 2
March 24, 2020

New ICD code introduced for COVID-19 deaths
This email is to alert you that a newly-introduced ICD code has been implemented to accurately capture mortality data for Coronavirus Disease 2019 (COVID-19) on death certificates.

Please read carefully and forward this email to the state statistical staff in your office who are involved in the preparation of mortality data, as well as others who may receive questions when the data are released.

What is the new code?
The new ICD code for Coronavirus Disease 2019 (COVID-19) is U07.1, and below is how it will appear in formal tabular list format.

U07.1 COVID-19
Exclude: Coronavirus infection, unspecified site (B34.2)
Severe acute respiratory syndrome [SARS], unspecified (U04.9)

The WHO has provided a second code, U07.2, for clinical or epidemiological diagnosis of COVID-19 where a laboratory confirmation is inconclusive or not available. Because laboratory test results are not typically reported on death certificates in the U.S., NCHS is not planning to implement U07.2 for mortality statistics.

When will it be implemented?
Immediately.

Will COVID-19 be the underlying cause?
The underlying cause depends upon what and where conditions are reported on the death certificate. However, the rules for coding and selection of the underlying cause of death are expected to result in COVID-19 being the underlying cause more often than not.

What happens if certifiers report terms other than the suggested terms?
If a death certificate reports coronavirus without identifying a specific strain or explicitly specifying that it is not COVID-19, NCHS will ask the states to follow up to verify whether or not the coronavirus was COVID-19.

The @IHME_UW model vs reality for New York State, April 5. The model is less accurate than ever. 69K beds projected, 16.5K actually needed; 12,346 ICU beds projected, 4376 needed. Even better (tho not for the model), overall bed count rose less than 600 statewide - less than 4%.

Cuomo when asked today about still needing 110k beds-"The number of beds doesn't really matter anymore. We have the beds. It's the ventilators, and then it's the staff." After going on about NY sharing v's from upstate to downstate, he admitted they haven't moved any yet.

Cuomo when asked today about still needing 110k beds-"The number of beds doesn't really matter anymore. We have the beds. It's the ventilators, and then it's the staff." After going on about NY sharing v's from upstate to downstate, he admitted they haven't moved any yet.

The @IHME_UW model vs reality for New York State, April 5. The model is less accurate than ever. 69K beds projected, 16.5K actually needed; 12,346 ICU beds projected, 4376 needed. Even better (tho not for the model), overall bed count rose less than 600 statewide - less than 4%.

Yeah but that was last month! This is this month. The study must be different now. Just wait until next month, when [redacted] finds out that actual real-works data (as opposed, to, umm, simulated models) show no evidence masks reduce transmission! He's gonna be so surprised.

> Dan Moody @DanielRMoody

1/ "There are at most 200K ventilators in the US. One million are expected to be needed." This horrifying news comes from my old employer [illegible]; it's sourced to the Society of Critical Care Medicine.

Only the SCCM didn't say that. At all. Let's see what it did say...

> There are at most 200k ventilators in the US. One million are expected to be needed. Experts say the Trump administration approach - let states fend for themselves in the market rather than a central authority step in - will doom people to die. nytimes.com/2020/03/25/hea...

2/ The number comes from a March 19 SCCM paper:

"[One estimate is that 1/2 of] ICU admissions (960,000) would require ventilatory support. Such projections are gross estimates."

More importantly: this is everyone who may need ventilation OVER THE COURSE OF THE EPIDEMIC...

I don't understand the point of trying to drive panic with stories that are so misleading - and, frankly, so easily checked.

6/ Final point: the paper concludes the real bottleneck is in trained staff and "priority should focus not only on increasing [ventilators]... but on growing the number of trained professionals."

But I guess bashing the WH for not nationalizing ventilator production is more fun.

1/ #COVID—19 is devastating hospitals and employees nationally. But not for the reason you think. They are empty - prepared for a surge that has not come - and burning cash. An executive reports his group's stronger hospitals have "months" of cash; the weaker ones have "weeks."

about 15 other CFOs

- Seeing decline in volume about 40% and similar revenue cut – his low was about 50% cut in volume but only about 2-5% COVID
- Outpatient basically is a zero
- Only exception is hot spots which have a lot of volume but much lower revenue and higher cost because of PPE
- A reasonable way to think about it is down 40-60% at the peak
- No one expects to recapture everything they lost
- Staff
  - Not flexing yet
  - Post spike in likely have to make some adjustments
  - Could take 40% off of earnings and need to reduce staffing by 10% but not close to enough
- Longer term impact

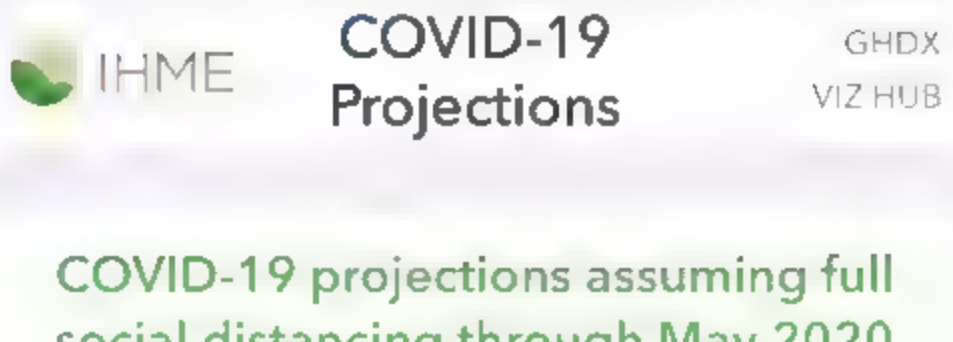
Time to start using more straightforward language and calling out people who don't tell the truth, like @pbump. The original model explicitly accounted for the effect of lockdowns. It was wrong in real-time, embarrassingly so; that's why it's been updated. (It's still wrong.)



Philip Bump @pbump
A notable shift downward in projected deaths from coronavirus is already being spun as "experts were wrong!!" Instead of "hey, the thing experts said would drive down deaths might be driving down deaths."

Washington State shuts down its COVID field hospital. Total patient count: Zero. The move is ""aimed at helping another state with a more significant need..." Good luck with that. kjow.org/stories/washin ...

Army field hospital for Covid-19 surge leaves Seattle after 9

field hospital deployed to CenturyLink Field Event Center to the U.S. Department of Defense.

The 250-bed facility, for which setup began on March 30, was intended to help Washington state's health care system tend to non Covid-19 patients in the event of a hospital surge.

But just three days after announcing the facility was ready to receive patients, officials say they're returning the hospital to the federal government.

The action is aimed at helping another state with a more significant need for hospital capacity at this time, according to the Governor's Office. The facility did not see any patients during the time it was slated to operate in Seattle.

1/ I try to analyze dispassionately. But I will admit I am ANGRY about the way we have largely ignored the massive harm lockdowns and school closings have on kids. Remember: anyone under 30 is at almost ZERO risk here (there are always outliers; planes crash but flying is safe).

Alex Berenson
@AlexBerenson

Följ

2/ Children, more than anyone else, suffer immediately from the lockdowns. They're denied school. They're denied normal socializing with their friends. In many places they have even - bizarrely - been denied the chance to play outside.

3/ The stress even on healthy families is incredible. And for children in troubled families, the cost is far higher; for those kids, schools may well be the only chance they have to be seen every day by an adult who is not high or abusive.

Alex Berenson @AlexBerenson · 10 apr.

4/ Of all the choices we've made, sacrificing the mental health of children at zero risk from this illness is the LEAST acceptable. But so many in the media are young and don't have children, or perhaps are married couples with one child (an equation that makes care easier).

Did the models for hospitalizations and deaths account for millions of hydroxychloroquine pills sent to NY and taken and work?

5/ BUT THE MODELS WERE WRONG. After March 25, new hospitalizations remained roughly flat in NY for the next 10 days. Now they have plunged. That's why the overflow in NYC is basically empty. (Outside NY, the trends are similar, and it doesn't matter when the lockdowns started.)

6/ Now, there are several possible reasonable arguments around this, including that voluntary social distancing had some effect before the lockdown. And there's a much broader question as to what is happening right now in Spain and Italy – or Japan, or Sweden.

7/ But before we can have that debate, everyone needs to underestimate that the models didn't fail last week because they UNDERESTIMATED the effect of the lockdowns. They failed because they OVERESTIMATED the effect. Anyone who says otherwise just doesn't understand the lag.

Time to start using more straightforward language and calling out people who don't tell the truth, like @pbump. The original model explicitly accounted for the effect of lockdowns. It was wrong in real-time, embarrassingly so; that's why it's been updated. (It's still wrong.)

Philip Bump @pbump
A notable shift downward in projected deaths from coronavirus is already being spun as "experts were wrong!!" Instead of "hey, the thing experts said would drive down deaths might be driving down deaths."

Community Hospital said Thursday that 30% to 50% of patients tested for the coronavirus have antibodies while only around 10% to 20% of those tested have the active virus.

Sumaya Owaynat, a phlebotomy technician, said she tests between 400 and 600 patients on an average day in the parking lot at Roseland Community Hospital. Drive-thru testing is from 9 a.m. to noon and 2 to 4 p.m. each day. However, the hospital has a limited number of tests they can give per day.

Owaynat said the number of patients coming through the testing center who appear to have Idk the answer either. It feels rather hopeless. But maybe don't give up, just expect and prepare for the worst.

My mistake. Another 3 million claims this week. So we're over 36.5 million.

I guess we can count them after all.

1/ Not to be sidetracked, but since this straw man is used sometimes: yes, Tell Your Children is right about cannabis. From @TheLancetPsych in March:

"A growing scientific consensus that cannabis does have a causal role in the development of psychosis..."

If you're wondering, the causality goes the other way. It is BECAUSE Tell Your Children showed me how the media can mangle data and science that I'm not afraid to stand up to them now.

6/ Final point: the paper concludes the real bottleneck is in trained staff and "priority should focus not only on increasing [ventilators]... but on growing the number of trained professionals."

But I guess bashing the WH for not nationalizing ventilator production is more fun.

The @IHME_UW model vs. reality for New York State, April 4: more of the same, 65,400 beds projected, 15,905 actually used (new hospitalizations fell notably day-over-day); 12,000 ICU beds projected, 4,100 used. Still basically fiction, but at least it's not getting MORE wrong.

The @IHME_UW model vs reality for New York State, April 5. The model is less accurate than ever. 69K beds projected, 16.5K actually needed; 12,346 ICU beds projected, 4376 needed. Even better (tho not for the model), overall bed count rose less than 600 statewide - less than 4%.

Cuomo when asked today about still needing 110k beds-"The number of beds doesn't really matter anymore. We have the beds. It's the ventilators, and then it's the staff." After going on about NY sharing v's from upstate to downstate, he admitted they haven't moved any yet.

2/ Unfortunately, though the model updated just now, its projections remain inaccurate for actual use TODAY: for example, it predicts New York state on April 5 will need 24,000 beds and 6,000 ICU beds, about 1/3 more than the actual usage today. Not sure what to say about this...

Cuomo on plan to take ventilators: We're not in the position that we were in that feared losing ventilators and other equipment to Gov. Andrew Cuomo's plan to take unused supplies may not have as much to worry about.

"We're not in the position that we were in," Cuomo said today during a press briefing in Albany.

He had said Friday he planned to sign an executive ordering requiring hospitals to give up unused ventilators and other medical gear. He said he would to deploy the National Guard to collect the supplies and redistribute them to hospitals stressed by the coronavirus pandemic in the New York City area.

1/ So I think this is a really excellent, non-hysterical thread on the real potential dangers of #C… - …@JDVance1 is smart and thoughtful - and it highlights yet again why we must have widespread serological testing as soon as possible.

So @NYGovCuomo has reported ICU patients and discharges for weeks. Not today. Just new hospitalizations - which are now 2/5 what they were a week ago - and deaths (a lagging indicator, as he said). I wonder why. And, oh yeah, a promise NY won't go back to normal anytime soon.

during his daily news conference to update the spread of the COVID-19 coronavirus, stating that ODH Director Dr. Amy Acton has signed the order.

"There is really nothing in that order, that we have not already been talking about," said DeWine. "There's nothing in that order, that I have not been asking you to do for the last week or so."

The order goes into effect at 11:59 p.m. Monday and will go until at least April 6. Then it will be reevaluated, according to DeWine.

DeWine stated that the ODH website would have more information when it was available.

1/ "There are at most 200K ventilators in the US. One million are expected to be needed." This horrifying news comes from my old employer [illegible]; it's sourced to the Society of Critical Care Medicine.

Only the SCCM didn't say that. At all. Let's see what it did say...

> There are at most 200k ventilators in the US. One million are expected to be needed. Experts say the Trump administration approach - let states fend for themselves in the market rather than a central authority step in - will doom people to die. nytimes.com/2020/03/25/hea...

2/ The number comes from a March 19 SCCM paper:

"[One estimate is that 1/2 of] ICU admissions (960,000) would require ventilatory support. Such projections are gross estimates."

More importantly: this is everyone who may need ventilation OVER THE COURSE OF THE EPIDEMIC...

5/ One last point here: Ferguson gives the lockdown credit, which is interesting - the UK only began ita lockdown 2 days ago, and the theory is that lockdowns take 2 weeks or more to work.

Alex Berenson
@AlexBerenson

6/ Not surprisingly, this testimony has received no attention in the US - I found it only in UK papers. Team Apocalypse is not interested.

1/ As you sit home watching #COVID death counts spiral, please know the official @CDCgov guidance for coding COVID-related deaths is as follows: any death where the disease “caused or is assumed to have caused or contributed to death.” Confirmed lab tests are not required...

cdc.gov

NVSS National Vital Statistics System

COVID-19 Alert No. 2
March 24, 2020

New ICD code introduced for COVID-19 deaths
This email is to alert you that a newly introduced ICD code has been implemented to accurately capture mortality data for Coronavirus Disease 2019 (COVID-19) on death certificates.

Please read carefully and forward this email to the state statistical staff in your office who are involved in the preparation of mortality data, as well as others who may receive questions when the data are released.

What is the new code?
The new ICD code for Coronavirus Disease 2019 (COVID-19) is U07.1, and below is how it will appear in formal tabular list format.

U07.1 COVID-19
Excludes: Coronavirus infection, unspecified site (B34.2)
Severe acute respiratory syndrome [SARS], unspecified (U04.9)

The WHO has provided a second code, U07.2, for clinical or epidemiological diagnosis of COVID-19 where a laboratory confirmation is inconclusive or not available. Because laboratory test results are not typically reported on death certificates in the U.S., NCHS is not planning to implement U07.2 for mortality statistics.

When will it be implemented?
Immediately.

Will COVID-19 be the underlying cause?
The underlying cause depends upon what and where conditions are reported on the death certificate. However, the rules for coding and selection of the underlying cause of death are expected to result in COVID-19 being the underlying cause more often than not.

What happens if certifiers report terms other than the suggested terms?
If a death certificate reports coronavirus without identifying a specific strain or explicitly specifying that it is not COVID-19, NCHS will ask the states to follow up to verify whether or not the coronavirus was COVID-19.

The @IHME_UW model vs. reality for New York State, April 4: more of the same, 65,400 beds projected, 15,905 actually used (new hospitalizations fell notably day-over-day); 12,000 ICU beds projected, 4,100 used. Still basically fiction, but at least it's not getting MORE wrong.

The @IHME_UW model vs reality for New York State, April 5. The model is less accurate than ever. 69K beds projected, 16.5K actually needed; 12,346 ICU beds projected, 4376 needed. Even better (tho not for the model), overall bed count rose less than 600 statewide - less than 4%.

Expect it to NOT be over, because social capital has been bet.
- Doubling downs
- Claims of "success!" for the lockdowns
- Jeers at the "deniers" for almost killing everyone

The hysteria will remain, and probably find its way into the history books as truth.

Expect it to NOT be over, because social capital has been bet.
- Doubling downs
- Claims of "success!" for the lockdowns
- Jeers at the "deniers" for almost killing everyone

The hysteria will remain, and probably find its way into the history books as truth.

I saw that in Cuomo yesterday. Plus, Trump has his fingers all over this mess. He failed to follow his gut and instead listened to these doctors who have not treated a patient in decades. What a debacle they caused.

I worked for Nielsen Media and they have "random" models that are very capable of doing this with a great deal of accuracy. They work in a multi billion dollar industry where absolute accurately counts.

#StayHomeOhio: It does permit exceptions to staying home. Common sense exceptions: leaving for health and safety, for necessary supplies and services, for outdoor activity (walking your dog, going to a park -- although playgrounds are closed).

Time to start using more straightforward language and calling out people who don't tell the truth, like @pbump. The original model explicitly accounted for the effect of lockdowns. It was wrong in real-time, embarrassingly so; that's why it's been updated. (It's still wrong.)

@pbump Philip Bump

A notable shift downward in projected deaths from coronavirus is already being spun as "experts were wrong!!" instead of "hey, the thing experts said would drive down deaths might be driving down deaths."

Nobody says COVID-19 is not real, that it can't tax hospitals or kill people, esp. if they are over 75 or have comorbidities. But right now the best CURRENT projection is for 61,000 US deaths. That was the 2017 flu season. Why have we shut the country?

field hospital deployed to CenturyLink Field Event Center to the U.S. Department of Defense.

The 250-bed facility, for which setup began on March 30, was intended to help Washington state's health care system tend to non Covid-19 patients in the event of a hospital surge.

But just three days after announcing the facility was ready to receive patients, officials say they're returning the hospital to the federal government.

The action is aimed at helping another state with a more significant need for hospital capacity at this time, according to the Governor's Office. The facility did not see any patients during the time it was slated to operate in Seattle.

3/ The models assumed (not unreasonably) that in places like New York, lockdowns had come TOO LATE. Between March 17 and March 25, hospitalizations in NY rose 7X. The models assumed that because of the time lag, the rise would go on UNTIL THE EFFECTS OF THE LOCKDOWN KICKED IN...

4/ By that point, >5,000 new patients every day would need hospitalization - and ultimately New York would need 140,000 hospital beds and 30,000-40,000 ventilators. (Remember those numbers?)

5/ BUT THE MODELS WERE WRONG. After March 25, new hospitalizations remained roughly flat in NY for the next 10 days. Now they have plunged. That's why the overflow in NYC is basically empty. (Outside NY, the trends are similar, and it doesn't matter when the lockdowns started.)

12 168 609

Alex Berenson @AlexBerenson · 10 d'abr.

6/ Now, there are several possible reasonable arguments around this, including that voluntary social distancing had some effect before the lockdown. And there's a much broader question as to what is happening right now in Spain and Italy – or Japan, or Sweden.

So [illegible] has a big story right now about a [illegible] model showing up to 300,000 deaths. The documents are "dated April 9," the story says. So they must account for everything we've learned this week - which would be bad news. But what the chart actually says: "Models from 3/31."

spike in infections if shelter in place orders are lifted at 30 days.

Stay-at-home orders, school closures and social distancing greatly reduce infections of the coronavirus, but lifting those restrictions after just 30 days will lead to a dramatic infection spike this summer and death tolls that would rival doing nothing, government projections indicate.

The projections obtained by The New York Times come from the departments of Homeland Security and Health and Human Services. The models use three scenarios. The first has policymakers doing nothing to mitigate the spread of the coronavirus. The

1/ So I don't want to go too far down the hole of arguing about #COVID death counts, but a reader pointed out a very odd change to the way Massachusetts is reporting deaths. Until April 6, the state reported deaths by day - that day, it reported 29. See below..

Long-Term Care Facilities Reporting At Least One Case of COVID-19	119
Hospitalization
Patient was hospitalized	1241
Patient was not hospitalized	3942
Under investigation	8654

These data are cumulative and current as of April 6, 2020 at 12:30PM

I used to agree with this theory. But wearing masks means accepting both social control and pseudo-science, and those choices caused this mess. Also, there's reopening and reopening; the governors still control schools and if they won't fully reopen those not much else matters.

NVSS National Vital Statistics System

COVID-19 Alert No. 2
March 24, 2020

New ICD code introduced for COVID-19 deaths
This email is to alert you that a newly-introduced ICD code has been implemented to accurately capture mortality data for Coronavirus Disease 2019 (COVID-19) on death certificates.

Please read carefully and forward this email to the state statistical staff in your office who are involved in the preparation of mortality data, as well as others who may receive questions when the data are released.

What is the new code?
The new ICD code for Coronavirus Disease 2019 (COVID-19) is U07.1, and below is how it will appear in formal tabular list format.

U07.1 COVID-19
Excludes: Coronavirus infection, unspecified site (B34.2)
Severe acute respiratory syndrome [SARS], unspecified (U04.9)

The WHO has provided a second code, U07.2, for clinical or epidemiological diagnosis of COVID-19 where a laboratory confirmation is inconclusive or not available. Because laboratory test results are not typically reported on death certificates in the U.S., NCHS is not planning to implement U07.2 for mortality statistics.

When will it be implemented?
Immediately.

Will COVID-19 be the underlying cause?
The underlying cause depends upon what and where conditions are reported on the death certificate. However, the rules for coding and selection of the underlying cause of death are expected to result in COVID-19 being the underlying cause more often than not.

What happens if certifiers report terms other than the suggested terms?
If a death certificate reports coronavirus without identifying a specific strain or explicitly specifying that it is not COVID-19, NCHS will ask the states to follow up to verify whether or not the coronavirus was COVID-19.

This is the @IMHE_UW model for #Covid_19, the new US standard. It was put out SIX days ago (post lockdown). It projects New York State will have 50,000 hospitalizations TODAY. Instead NYS has 12,000. Wrong by 4x in under a week. What on earth are we doing? covid19.healthdata.org/projections

National Vital Statistics System

COVID-19 Alert No. 2
March 24, 2020

New ICD code introduced for COVID-19 deaths
This email is to alert you that a newly-introduced ICD code has been implemented to accurately capture mortality data for Coronavirus Disease 2019 (COVID-19) on death certificates.

Please read carefully and forward this email to the state statistical staff in your office who are involved in the preparation of mortality data, as well as others who may receive questions when the data are released.

What is the new code?
The new ICD code for Coronavirus Disease 2019 (COVID-19) is U07.1, and below is how it will appear in formal tabular list format.

U07.1 COVID-19
Excludes: Coronavirus infection, unspecified site (B34.2)
Severe acute respiratory syndrome [SARS], unspecified (U04.9)

The WHO has provided a second code, U07.2, for clinical or epidemiological diagnosis of COVID-19 where a laboratory confirmation is inconclusive or not available. Because laboratory test results are not typically reported on death certificates in the U.S., NCHS is not planning to implement U07.2 for mortality statistics.

When will it be implemented?
Immediately.

Will COVID-19 be the underlying cause?
The underlying cause depends upon what and where conditions are reported on the death certificate. However, the rules for coding and selection of the underlying cause of death are expected to result in COVID-19 being the underlying cause more often than not.

What happens if certifiers report terms other than the suggested terms?
If a death certificate reports coronavirus without identifying a specific strain or explicitly specifying that it is not COVID-19, NCHS will ask the states to follow up to verify whether or not the coronavirus was COVID-19.

Alex Berenson
@AlexBerenson

2/ And, btw, other possibly relevant factors, like, oh, COPD, are considered secondary. The rules “are expected to result in COVID-19 being the underlying cause more often than not.”

The @IHME_UW model vs. reality for New York State, April 4: more of the same, 65,400 beds projected, 15,905 actually used (new hospitalizations fell notably day-over-day); 12,000 ICU beds projected, 4,100 used. Still basically fiction, but at least it's not getting MORE wrong.

The @IHME_UW model vs reality for New York State, April 5. The model is less accurate than ever. 69K beds projected, 16.5K actually needed; 12,346 ICU beds projected, 4376 needed. Even better (tho not for the model), overall bed count rose less than 600 statewide - less than 4%.

Cuomo when asked today about still needing 110k beds-"The number of beds doesn't really matter anymore. We have the beds. It's the ventilators, and then it's the staff." After going on about NY sharing v's from upstate to downstate, he admitted they haven't moved any yet.

2/ Unfortunately, though the model updated just now, its projections remain inaccurate for actual use TODAY: for example, it predicts New York state on April 5 will need 24,000 beds and 6,000 ICU beds, about 1/3 more than the actual usage today. Not sure what to say about this...

The hysteria will remain, and probably find its way into the history books as truth.

I worked for Nielsen Media and they have "random" models that are very capable of doing this with a great deal of accuracy. They work in a multi billion dollar industry where absolute accurately counts.

He had said Friday he planned to sign an executive ordering requiring hospitals to give up unused ventilators and other medical gear. He said he would to deploy the National Guard to collect the supplies and redistribute them to hospitals stressed by the coronavirus pandemic in the New York City area.

1/ I'm going to try to explain this once more for all the blue-checks insisting that they KNOW lockdowns work.

The models failed. In real time. Even in NY state, the April 1 iteration of [illegible] model estimated four times the hospitalizations last week as were taking place.

Alex Berenson
@AlexBerenson

Följ

2/ But it's crucial to understand WHY they failed.

There is a TIME LAG between infection, symptoms, hospitalization, ICU care, and death. 5 days on average from infection to symptoms, several more days to hospitalization, 2-3 more to ICU care. These are averages, but correct.

Wow. So this is a non-random sample and only one data point, but at a testing site in Chicago 30-50% of people are testing positive for CV antibodies (meaning they have already had the virus). WE NEED WIDESPREAD ANTIBODY TESTING.

I saw that in Cuomo yesterday. Plus, Trump has his fingers all over this mess. He failed to follow his gut and instead listened to these doctors who have not treated a patient in decades. What a debacle they caused.

I worked for Nielsen Media and they have "random" models that are very capable of doing this with a great deal of accuracy. They work in a multi billion dollar industry where absolute accurately counts.

…that feared losing ventilators and other equipment to Gov. Andrew Cuomo's plan to take unused supplies may not have as much to worry about.

"We're not in the position that we were in," Cuomo said today during a press briefing in Albany.

He had said Friday he planned to sign an executive ordering requiring hospitals to give up unused ventilators and other medical gear. He said he would to deploy the National Guard to collect the supplies and redistribute them to hospitals stressed by the coronavirus pandemic in the New York City area.

So @NYGovCuomo has reported ICU patients and discharges for weeks. Not today. Just new hospitalizations - which are now 2/5 what they were a week ago - and deaths (a lagging indicator, as he said). I wonder why. And, oh yeah, a promise NY won't go back to normal anytime soon.

1/ #COVID—19 is devastating hospitals and employees nationally. But not for the reason you think. They are empty - prepared for a surge that has not come - and burning cash. An executive reports his group's stronger hospitals have "months" of cash; the weaker ones have "weeks."

about 15 other CFOs

- Seeing decline in volume about 40% and similar revenue cut – his low was about 50% cut in volume but only about 2-5% COVID
- Outpatient basically is a zero
- Only exception is hot spots which have a lot of volume but much lower revenue and higher cost because of PPE
- A reasonable way to think about it is down 40-60% at the peak
- No one expects to recapture everything they lost
- Staff
  - Not flexing yet
  - Post spike in likely have to make some adjustments
  - Could take 40% off of earnings and need to reduce staffing by 10% but not close to enough
- Longer term impact

#StayHomeOhio: It does permit exceptions to staying home. Common sense exceptions: leaving for health and safety, for necessary supplies and services, for outdoor activity (walking your dog, going to a park -- although playgrounds are closed).

Time to start using more straightforward language and calling out people who don't tell the truth, like @pbump. The original model explicitly accounted for the effect of lockdowns. It was wrong in real-time, embarrassingly so; that's why it's been updated. (It's still wrong.)

Philip Bump @pbump
A notable shift downward in projected deaths from coronavirus is already being spun as "experts were wrong!!" Instead of "hey, the thing experts said would drive down deaths might be driving down deaths."

it's as if MSM is willfully ignorant of the difference between social distancing and complete lockdown; a supposed statewide "lock down" went into effect here in GA last Friday, after the heat just became too much for our governor, but almost nothing changed!

This should be front-page news everywhere. Wonder why it's not.

New German data show that 15 percent of people in one region have already been infected with CV (remember - more infections is good news, it means the virus is less dangerous) and the fatality rate is 0.37%.

1/ Look, I get why people were so scared three or four weeks ago. I was too. But now - for the media to ignore the real demographics and scare people with outlier cases - to ignore the mostly empty hospitals all over the country - to pretend that the models weren't wrong...

And we cannot afford that - not with unemployment headed to its worst levels since the Depression, not with children denied school and our rights under siege.

1/ I'm going to try to explain this once more for all the blue-checks insisting that they KNOW lockdowns work.

The models failed. In real time. Even in NY state, the April 1 iteration of [illegible] model estimated four times the hospitalizations last week as were taking place.

Alex Berenson
@AlexBerenson

2/ But it's crucial to understand WHY they failed.

There is a TIME LAG between infection, symptoms, hospitalization, ICU care, and death. 5 days on average from infection to symptoms, several more days to hospitalization, 2-3 more to ICU care. These are averages, but correct.

3/ The models assumed (not unreasonably) that in places like New York, lockdowns had come TOO LATE. Between March 17 and March 25, hospitalizations in NY rose 7X. The models assumed that because of the time lag, the rise would go on UNTIL THE EFFECTS OF THE LOCKDOWN KICKED IN...

5/ BUT THE MODELS WERE WRONG. After March 25, new hospitalizations remained roughly flat in NY for the next 10 days. Now they have plunged. That's why the overflow in NYC is basically empty. (Outside NY, the trends are similar, and it doesn't matter when the lockdowns started.)

12 168 609

Alex Berenson
@AlexBerenson

6/ Now, there are several possible reasonable arguments around this, including that voluntary social distancing had some effect before the lockdown. And there's a much broader question as to what is happening right now in Spain and Italy – or Japan, or Sweden.

1/ As you sit home watching #COVID death counts spiral, please know the official @CDCgov guidance for coding COVID-related deaths is as follows: any death where the disease "caused or is assumed to have caused or contributed to death." Confirmed lab tests are not required...

cdc.gov

NVSS National Vital Statistics System

COVID-19 Alert No. 2
March 24, 2020

New ICD code introduced for COVID-19 deaths
This email is to alert you that a newly-introduced ICD code has been implemented to accurately capture mortality data for Coronavirus Disease 2019 (COVID-19) on death certificates.

Please read carefully and forward this email to the state statistical staff in your office who are involved in the preparation of mortality data, as well as others who may receive questions when the data are released.

What is the new code?
The new ICD code for Coronavirus Disease 2019 (COVID-19) is U07.1, and below is how it will appear in formal tabular list format.

U07.1 COVID-19
Excludes: Coronavirus infection, unspecified site (B34.2)
Severe acute respiratory syndrome [SARS], unspecified (U04.9)

The WHO has provided a second code, U07.2, for clinical or epidemiological diagnosis of COVID-19 where a laboratory confirmation is inconclusive or not available. Because laboratory test results are not typically reported on death certificates in the U.S., NCHS is not planning to implement U07.2 for mortality statistics.

When will it be implemented?
Immediately.

Will COVID-19 be the underlying cause?
The underlying cause depends upon what and where conditions are reported on the death certificate. However, the rules for coding and selection of the underlying cause of death are expected to result in COVID-19 being the underlying cause more often than not.

What happens if certifiers report terms other than the suggested terms?
If a death certificate reports coronavirus without identifying a specific strain or explicitly specifying that it is not COVID-19, NCHS will ask the states to follow up to verify whether or not the coronavirus was COVID-19.

The @IHME_UW model vs. reality for New York State, April 4: more of the same, 65,400 beds projected, 15,905 actually used (new hospitalizations fell notably day-over-day); 12,000 ICU beds projected, 4,100 used. Still basically fiction, but at least it's not getting MORE wrong.

The @IHME_UW model vs reality for New York State, April 5. The model is less accurate than ever. 69K beds projected, 16.5K actually needed; 12,346 ICU beds projected, 4376 needed. Even better (tho not for the model), overall bed count rose less than 4%.

Cuomo when asked today about still needing 110k beds-"The number of beds doesn't really matter anymore. We have the beds. It's the ventilators, and then it's the staff." After going on about NY sharing v's from upstate to downstate, he admitted they haven't moved any yet.

Expect it to NOT be over, because social capital has been bet.
- Doubling downs
- Claims of "success!" for the lockdowns
- Jeers at the "deniers" for almost killing everyone

The hysteria will remain, and probably find its way into the history books as truth.

From Minnesota. The median age of the 29 people there who died from #COVID? 86. Including a 69-year-old who had just gone through a double lung transplant.

17 of the 29 lived in long-term care facilities.

Minnesota remains on indefinite lockdown.

...that feared losing ventilators and other equipment to Gov. Andrew Cuomo's plan to take unused supplies may not have as much to worry about.

"We're not in the position that we were in," Cuomo said today during a press briefing in Albany.

He had said Friday he planned to sign an executive ordering requiring hospitals to give up unused ventilators and other medical gear. He said he would to deploy the National Guard to collect the supplies and redistribute them to hospitals stressed by the coronavirus pandemic in the New York City area.

"There is really nothing in that order, that we have not already been talking about," said DeWine. "There's nothing in that order, that I have not been asking you to do for the last week or so."

The order goes into effect at 11:59 p.m. Monday and will go until at least April 6. Then it will be reevaluated, according to DeWine.

DeWine stated that the ODH website would have more information when it was available.

New German data show that 15 percent of people in one region have already been infected with CV (remember - more infections is good news, it means the virus is less dangerous) and the fatality rate is 0.37%.

1/ I'm going to try to explain this once more for all the blue-checks insisting that they KNOW lockdowns work.

The models failed. In real time. Even in NY state, the April 1 iteration of [illegible] model estimated four times the hospitalizations last week as were taking place.

Alex Berenson

2/ But it's crucial to understand WHY they failed.

There is a TIME LAG between infection, symptoms, hospitalization, ICU care, and death. 5 days on average from infection to symptoms, several more days to hospitalization, 2-3 more to ICU care. These are averages, but correct.

Did the models for hospitalizations and deaths account for millions of hydroxychloroquine pills sent to NY and taken and work?

5/ BUT THE MODELS WERE WRONG. After March 25, new hospitalizations remained roughly flat in NY for the next 10 days. Now they have plunged. That's why the overflow in NYC is basically empty. (Outside NY, the trends are similar, and it doesn't matter when the lockdowns started.)

6/ Now, there are several possible reasonable arguments around this, including that voluntary social distancing had some effect before the lockdown. And there's a much broader question as to what is happening right now in Spain and Italy – or Japan, or Sweden.

7/ But before we can have that debate, everyone needs to underestimate that the models didn't fail last week because they UNDERESTIMATED the effect of the lockdowns. They failed because they OVERESTIMATED the effect. Anyone who says otherwise just doesn't understand the lag.

1/ So I don't want to go too far down the hole of arguing about #COVID death counts, but a reader pointed out a very odd change to the way Massachusetts is reporting deaths. Until April 6, the state reported deaths by day - that day, it reported 29. See below..

Long-Term Care Facilities Reporting At Least One Case of COVID-19	119
Hospitalization
Patient was hospitalized	1241
Patient was not hospitalized	3942
Under investigation	8654

These data are cumulative and current as of April 6, 2020 at 12:30PM
*Reflects improved facility definitions and data collection. These include positive cases at nursing homes, rest homes, and skilled nursing facilities.

1/ As you sit home watching #COVID death counts spiral, please know the official @CDCgov guidance for coding COVID-related deaths is as follows: any death where the disease "caused or is assumed to have caused or contributed to death." Confirmed lab tests are not required...

cdc.gov

NVSS National Vital Statistics System

COVID-19 Alert No. 2
March 24, 2020

New ICD code introduced for COVID-19 deaths
This email is to alert you that a newly-introduced ICD code has been implemented to accurately capture mortality data for Coronavirus Disease 2019 (COVID-19) on death certificates.

Please read carefully and forward this email to the state statistical staff in your office who are involved in the preparation of mortality data, as well as others who may receive questions when the data are released.

What is the new code?
The new ICD code for Coronavirus Disease 2019 (COVID-19) is U07.1, and below is how it will appear in formal tabular list format.

U07.1 COVID-19
Excludes: Coronavirus infection, unspecified site (B34.2)
Severe acute respiratory syndrome [SARS], unspecified (U04.9)

The WHO has provided a second code, U07.2, for clinical or epidemiological diagnosis of COVID-19 where a laboratory confirmation is inconclusive or not available. Because laboratory test results are not typically reported on death certificates in the U.S., NCHS is not planning to implement U07.2 for mortality statistics.

When will it be implemented?
Immediately.

Will COVID-19 be the underlying cause?
The underlying cause depends upon what and where conditions are reported on the death certificate. However, the rules for coding and selection of the underlying cause of death are expected to result in COVID-19 being the underlying cause more often than not.

What happens if certifiers report terms other than the suggested terms?
If a death certificate reports coronavirus without identifying a specific strain or explicitly specifying that it is not COVID-19, NCHS will ask the states to follow up to verify whether or not the coronavirus was COVID-19.

The @IHME_UW model vs. reality for New York State, April 4: more of the same, 65,400 beds projected, 15,905 actually used (new hospitalizations fell notably day-over-day); 12,000 ICU beds projected, 4,100 used. Still basically fiction, but at least it's not getting MORE wrong.

The @IHME_UW model vs reality for New York State, April 5. The model is less accurate than ever. 69K beds projected, 16.5K actually needed; 12,346 ICU beds projected, 4376 needed. Even better (tho not for the model), overall bed count rose less than 600 statewide - less than 4%.

Cuomo when asked today about still needing 110k beds-"The number of beds doesn't really matter anymore. We have the beds. It's the ventilators, and then it's the staff." After going on about NY sharing v's from upstate to downstate, he admitted they haven't moved any yet.

I saw that in Cuomo yesterday. Plus, Trump has his fingers all over this mess. He failed to follow his gut and instead listened to these doctors who have not treated a patient in decades. What a debacle they caused.

I worked for Nielsen Media and they have "random" models that are very capable of doing this with a great deal of accuracy. They work in a multi billion dollar industry where absolute accurately counts.

1/ So I think this is a really excellent, non-hysterical thread on the real potential dangers of #C... - ...@JDVance1 is smart and thoughtful - and it highlights yet again why we must have widespread serological testing as soon as possible.

> J.D. Vance @JDVance1

2/ I would make a couple of points - it glides over just how concentrated the excess mortality risk appears to be in the very old and sick.Why isn't our focus on protecting THOSE folks rather than going immediately to lockdowns - which are hugely destructive by any measure?

3/ And while acknowledging the economic crisis, Vance more or less throws up his hands, saying that it would have happened anyway. But the difference between voluntary social distancing and what we have now is the distance between recession and depression. That's no exaggeration.

1/ #COVID-19 is devastating hospitals and employees nationally. But not for the reason you think. They are empty - prepared for a surge that has not come - and burning cash. An executive reports his group's stronger hospitals have "months" of cash; the weaker ones have "weeks."

about 15 other CFOs

- Seeing decline in volume about 40% and similar revenue cut – his low was about 50% cut in volume but only about 2-5% COVID
- Outpatient basically is a zero
- Only exception is hot spots which have a lot of volume but much lower revenue and higher cost because of PPE
- A reasonable way to think about it is down 40-60% at the peak
- No one expects to recapture everything they lost
- Staff
  - Not flexing yet
  - Post spike in likely have to make some adjustments
  - Could take 40% off of earnings and need to reduce staffing by 10% but not close to enough
- Longer term impact

1/ Let's talk more about the magic of "social distancing": yesterday the Ohio governor said it had reduced the state's projected peak daily cases from 62,000 to 1,600. Awesome! But let's take a closer look, shall we?

4/ Folks, at this point it's like an exercise to see if anyone is paying attention, a combination of a national folie a deux and Munchausen's syndrome by proxy. WHAT IS GOING ON?

There are barely even verb tenses adequate to explain what the Ohio graphs purportedly show.

You're conflating social distancing with the lockdown order. Social distancing was occurring before it.

As an Ohioian, I am so disgusted with how this whole thing has been handled. They bought Acton's "act" hook-line-and-sinker. When will DeWine realize that the stupid exec orders are no longer necessary & get Ohio back to work? Probably never, he is drunk on the praise over this!

Natalie Rowe @NatRowe417 · 9 apr

I'd be interested to know how much praise he's getting..maybe from the media but that's to be expected. I'm starting to see a shift in attitude towards this. The mantra is starting to get old and people want their jobs and lives

3/ Only Ohio didn't actually issue a lockdown order until Monday, March 23. Yes, lockdowns are such magic that they can PREVENT (theoretical) peaks that occurred before they were issued...

during his daily news conference to update the spread of the COVID-19 coronavirus, stating that ODH Director Dr. Amy Acton has signed the order.

"There is really nothing in that order, that we have not already been talking about," said DeWine. "There's nothing in that order, that I have not been asking you to do for the last week or so."
